LEBANESE INFLUX ANNOYS LIBERIANS

Government Is Taking Action to Limit the Refugees

MONROVIA, Liberia, July 24 MONROVIA, Liberia, July 24 (Reuters)—A civil war thou-sands of miles away in Lebanon has brought growing numbers of refugees to Liberia, prompt-ing complaints from unem-ployed Liberians and action by the Government to limit the in-flux. flux.

There has traditionally been a substantial Lebanese com-munity in this West African country of one and a half mil-lion people.

Official figures for 1975 showed 33 Lebanese here granted residence permits, 961 had their permits renewed and 159 were given re-entry per-nits. But officials say there has been a coosiderable increase this year.

Many of the Lebanese have established themselves as shop-keepers and traders. As their relatives arrive from their rav-aged homeland, jobs are found for them in shops and offices.

The result, from the Liberian viewpoint, is another obstacle to the Government policy of "Liberianization." or placing more on the country's citizens in jobs previously held by for-eigners.

eigners. The Justice Ministry has told immigration officials that any aliens arriving without visas, especially Lebanese, are to be put back on the planes that brought them and sent back to their country of origin.

The Liberian Embassy in Lebanon has been closed and its staff evacuated during the fighting in Beirut.

The immigration chief, James Bull, said that there had been a considerable increase in the number of Lebanese entering the country, though statistics were not immediately available for this user for this year.

Poor Go to Liberia

A Llberian watching Leba-nese debark from an airliner at this capital's airport comat this capital's airport com-plained that the poor Lebanese came to Liberia, "while the rich Lebanese go to Italy, Cyprus and other European countries." The Acting Justice Minister, Astrada Barnard, said when asked to comment on the public reaction, that the ministry was aware that the situation was affecting social problems and unemployment. He said that Liberia bad

The only clue to his where abouts, the newspaper said, is a report by the police in that tiny northern town of Axum that Mr. Swain checked out of a hotel there on June 15.

The Sunday Times said the British Consul in Addis Ababa tried to fly to Axum early last week to make inquiries but was unable to reach the town, which is close to the Eritrean border where the peasant army

EGYPT SPURRING EGG PRODUCTION

Government Has Set a Goal to Raise Dally Output to 400,000 by 1978

By ERIC PACE

cial to The New York Tim CAIRO, July 20-The Egyp an Government is pushing tian Government is pushing plans to enlarge the poultry in-dustry, spruce up the Suez Canai and carry out other development projects despite the country's burden of debts. now unofficially estimated at $10 billion or more.

To help finaoce development Egyptian officials hope for more aid from tha oil-producing

Arab states. Ar a recent meeting here, representatives of Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Saudi Arabia initialed an agreement setting up a S2 bil-lion fund for economic development in Egypt. What it is to be spent for has not beeo an-nounced. Further negotiations are to be held with Egyptian officials.

The Egyptian Information Minister, Gamai ei Oteify, an-nounced last week that the Government had worked out a plan to increase the relatively small egg production of stateowned chicken farms from the present daily level of 170.000 to 200,000 by October. The Government is also aiming at doubling this by 1978. Privately owned egg production last year was at the rate of 4.13 million a day. The Gov-eroment hopes that a substantial increase in this total could be achieved with help from estern investors.

Protein Lack a Problem

Poultry production, and the supply of protein-high foods in general, has for years been a matter of concern to Egyptian governments-as it has been in other eastern Mediterranean countries, where the diet has been based too heavily on ce-reals, seasonal vegetables and suga

This concern has been deepened by continued population growth. Though Egypt has not had a census for 15 years, the growth rate is thought to be 2.2 to 2.6 percent a year and the population is estimated at more than 38 million.

Even 20 years ago, not long after the overthrow of Egypt's last monarch, King Farouk, the Government moved into the egg husiness. A model incubating center was set up at an estate near Cairo that had been expropriated from kinsmen of King. Selected varieties of poultry were sent out from the estate, and from local distribucenters, to agricultural

Over the years efforts to enhance the poultry industry have been undercut by such problems as a high rate of mortality among chicks distributed by the Government and fraud in the sale of poultry feed.

Plans Held Optimistic

In announcing its new expansion plans, the Government is showing the perennial optimism that has led to a certain amount of head-shaking io the international economic com-munity over its long-range, large-scale economic planning. Though details of the Government's five-year plan for 1976-S0 have not yet been announced, it is expected to include 20 percent increase in agricultural production and ao 30 percent increase in industrial production over the period as well as ao annual increase in the gross national product of 7 percent or more. The convertible - currency costs of the additions to Egypt's economic base and in-Egypt's economic base and in-dustrial capacity that are eovis-aged under the plan are expect-ed to run at least $20 billion, with much of the mooey com-iog from the oil states. Man-tailored this. Man-tailored that. We've been hearing about it for months. Why should a woman be more like a man?" we asked each other. "Who wants to look as if she were auditioning for Notorious Woman'?"

But, as you can see from our drawings, mocko-macho is not what designer Bill Haire has in mind. All the dashing haberdashery he creates has a softened and gentled and very female feeling.

The result: a new sporty sophistication that's sleek but never strict. Little details do it. Flip-back cuffs. Flip-bowed shirts. A curved line where it counts. Soft, all-climate fabrics, because you go climate-hopping more than you used to. (For instance, these creamy wool and nylon flannels Mr. Haire traveled to Italy to pick for you.)

These two outfits are a sampling of the smooth collection Bill Haire has done for Friedricks. Everything is in a new, liquid-deep shade of brown that he calls rum-and-coke. Our longer, slimmer tunic is 100.00. The slender trouser skirt is 76.00.

In our smaller sketch, the mini-checked blazer is 144.00. Glen plaid pleated trousers, 84.00. Plaid vest 68.00. All these in Bill's Italian flannel. The plaid shirt (shown twice) is beige and brown polyester crepe de chine at 48.00. All for sizes 6 through 14.

Now you know that this is one designer who understands your go-a-lot, do-a-lot life style. And you'll discover something else when you meet Bill Haire. (Haire tomorrow, _12:30 till 2, with models.) He likes you.

He thinks you're smart. ("Brilliant" is really what he told us.) "Today's woman" says Bill, "understands. I only make suggestions. She knows how to put the pieces together to please herself and stretch her wardrobe."

So here's your Master Plan for tomorrow, smart one. Study Bill Haire's ideas in our Fifth Avenue windows. Then come on up to Studio III on three, meet Bill Haire and collect some compliments in person. You deserve them.

FIRE ON QE2 HALTS NEW YORK VOYAGE

Explosion Off English Coast - Wrecks Engine Room

LONDON, Juy 24 (AP)-Her engine room a shambles and her funnel blistered by fire, the British ocean liner Queen Elizabeth 2 slowly sailed up the English Channel today after a fire halted a voyage to New York.

The 66,851-ton Cunard Lioes luxury ship, the only British licer still making the trans-Atlantic run, was heading for her home port of Southampton tonight. Cunard Lines was arranging to fly most of tha 1,200 passengers, including about 780 Americans, to New York tomorrow or Monday.

Cunard engineers were waiting to assess the damage to the ship'a starboard turbine engine and determine the cause of the fire. The blaze started about 5 A.M. yesterday, when the ship was 80 miles west of the Scilly Islands off England's southwestern tip, and hurned for 50 minutes.

An eogine room mechanic, Kenneth P. Lyon, 20 years old. was the ooly person reported injured. Capt. Mortimer Hehir told passengers that Mr. Lyon was io "very serious" condition last night.

Preceded By Explosion

An Americao passenger, James Yuenger of Chicago, said in a ship-to-shore tele-phooe interview that the fire had beeo preceded by an explo-sioo. He said that most of the passengers were sleeping and were oot aware anything was wroog until breakfast yesterday morning.

A London newspaper quoted a steward, Robin Pecw, as hav-ing said: "There was a heavy explosion in the starboard engine geoerator. The funnel's to mobilize broad public support for immediate antihijacking legislation action by the Federal Government to try to bring an end to air piracy. Io an advertisemeot published in today's issue of Tha New York Times, the organization also called upon the international civil eviation community to initiate protective measures. The statement said:

"Legislation is needed that will direct the President to suspeod air service to (1) any country used as a base of operations or training or as a sanctuary for terrorists; (2) any. country that arms, aids or abets terrorist organizations, and (3) any country that continues to maintaio air traffic with an offeoding state.

"At the same time legislation is needed that will curtail all U.S. economic and military assistance to any nation that encourages, protects, supplies—or fails to take appropriate actioo against organizations guilty of air terrorism."

The organization's statement said that it was vital to protect lives in such incidents as the secent hijacking hy guerrillas of an Air France plane. Israeli forces invaded a Ugaoda airport to rescue 103 hostages, most of them Israeli citizens.

The statement also said: "The private civil aviation community must agree collectively to seal off from air traffic any country whose actioos make it an accomplice in the crime of hijacking."

The International Air Transport Associatioo and the loternational Federation of Airline Pilnts Association were re-quested "to make clear that they oo longer will fly to any nation that (1) refused immediately to return a hijacked plane, its passengers or crew; (2) gives haven to those respon-sible for any hijacking, or (3) fails to prosecute or extradite hijack terrorists promptly."

Richard Cohen, cecutive director associa executive of the American said: Jewish Congress

"We hope to win support of Christian groups, labor, black groups, veteran organizations, The American airline iodustry and all other groups that share with us a revulsioo against such terrorism and a frustration over the fact that nothing really has been done about this practice."

The advertisement contained a coupon seeking donatioos to support the campaign.

Power Pool report that 24 new generating stations would have to be built in the next 15 years to meet the projected load growth in the state.

At present there are four operating nuclear plants in the state, one shut down for repairs, one completed but not yet operational, two under con-struction; and four for which applications bave been made to appropriate state and Federal agencies.

Town Shocked by News

The news of its selection as a possible nuclear site came as a surprise and a shock to this rural area of 1,665 persons in the mid-Hudson Valley, which already is involved in a controversy about a different proposed atomic power plant. About 20 miles downriver on the other side of the Hudson in Greene County, the State Power Authority has filed an application to build a 1.2-mil-lion kilowatt nuclear power olant. Many local residents have objected on the ground that its safety has not been demonstrated to their satisfaction. That same objection was voiced to the new proposal by Robert LaBrie, supervisor of Stuyvesant.

"I am strongly opposed to it." he said. "The main reason is that the experts can't agree on the safety factors of a nuclear plant

The county's only daily newspaper, The Hudson Regis-ter-Star, summarized the action in this headline vesterday: "New Power Plant Shocks Residents.

Study is Under Way

Robert E. Lyons, whose dairy farm of 255 acres is within the area under consideration, said that he learned about the site selection at 8 o'clock the other morning when representatives from the company approached him to sign a waiver permitting! it to do some test borings. "I was shocked at the news."

he said, explaining that he and, his family came to the area six rears ago with the intention of staying on. "We don't want to move.

Mr. LaBrie and some other residents made their comments on the basis of their conclusion that the new plant would be an atomic one, even though the company said in its announce. ment and subsequent explana-tions that no choice had been made.

In its announcement the util-ity said that it had selected the two final sites after studying 540 possible ones throughout the state, From them, 100 possible sites were evaluated fur-ter, dropping down to 20 pre-ferred sites and then the two, finalists.

At the end of the detailed studies by geologists, weather specialists, biologists, waterquality experts. demographers. sociologists and economists, one of the sites will be desig-nated as the preferred location and the other as the alternawill file applications with the Public Service Commission for permission to build the plant.

Cash-starved New York City is due for a tidy windfall from the Federal Public Works Act, eoacted Thursday over Presi-deot's Ford's veto, but has yet to decide exactly how to use to decide exactly how to use the money. According to the formula used by the Senate Govern-meot Operations Committee, the city will get around $75.9 millioo in a direct graot under the provisions of the bill aimed at maiotaining basic services such as police and fire protect-

City officials would say little yesterday about their plans for the money, but uoion officials said they hoped it would be used to avoid further layoffs. In addition the Public Works Act will provide millions of dollars for ion-creating capital dollars for job-creating capital improvements projects. The state as a whole is entitled to up to $250 million for construction projects that can be started within 90 days of the time the money is received. City officials said it was impossible to predict how much of those funds would come to the city, but New York suffers from no shortage of capital projects that cao be started up or picked up in a hurry.

"A substantial number of our A substantial number of our projects would be eligible," said First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti. "A lot of projects got stuck in the pipeline dur-ing the fiscal crisis—schools and sewers, and much more." "We would almost have to bold a drawing because so many projects have not gone forward," Mr. Zuccotti said. "We are trying to set priorities on them oow. The Budget Bu-reau is reviewing the universe." Title II of the public works measure consists of so-called countercycle grants to states and communities with high im-employment to enable them to maintain municipal services, such as fire and police protec-tion and garbage collection. This direct-graot aid is like revenuesharing money, and Mr. Zuccotti said it would be used to help with the city's fiscal situation.

New York State will get $190 million of the "countercyclical" money, which, according to Representative Bella S. Abzug, Democrat of Manbattan and a member of the House Public Works Committee, should save about 18.000 government jobs. "We're asking for a meetiog with city officials to determine the impact of this money on public service iobs. It will cer-tainly help with the fiscal crisis, and we are hoping that some portioo of it will be used for rehiring and, even more im-portant, to prevent further layoffs. We still have batches of layoffs coming down every week, they are cootinuing, and we just don't know to what extent this can be allocated for rehiring."

Appropriation Needed

Although both the House and the Senate overrode President Ford's veto of the public works bill this week, the Con-gress still bas to actually ap-propriate the $4 billion called for by the act. The span be-tweeo Congressional authorization and appropriation can stretch out, but Representative Abzug said sbe hoped Congress would appropriate the funds before its August recess. "The Public Works Commit tee is holding an emergency meeting with the Appropra-tions Committee Monday," ske said, "and we'll push for action because of the secood recess." The countercyclical funds will go directly to the cities,' but the Federal Economic Development Administration will screen applicatioos for graots for public works projects. E.D.A. is formulating 'Its guidelines and procedures." said John Eden, Acting Assist-ant Secretary of Commerce. "The bill calls for having the midelines and within 30 days guidelices ready withic 30 thays of the acthorizatioo, and we will publisb them on Aug. 23. The applications will be con-sidered on a project-by-project basis. The act says the E.D.A. will take into consideration the rate of unemployment and how rapidly a project can get under construction."

Representative Abzug, like other New York politicians, is full of ideas on how to spend the money. She suggested that the completion of the Third Water Tunnel for New York, a project that has been stalled for lack of funds, would be a good possibility. The tunnel would provide wa-ter for Nassau and Suffolk Counties, and according to Represectative Abzug, would pro-vide jobs for 8,000 sand hogs, electrical workers, iron workers, laborers and operatiog en-gineers. She would also like to see the city go forward with long-standing plans for renovation of the West Side 72d Street subway station.

In the division of "countercyclical" funds, according the formula in the bill, Nassau County would receive $2.69 million and Westchester would get $1.366 million. The Etale of New Jersey would get $59.5 million in countercyclical money and is eligible for up to million $250 million of the public works

WEST POINT FACES NEW DIFFICULTIES

Esprit of Accused Cadets Is Fresh Factor in Lingering Cheating Controversy

By JAMES FERON Special to The New York Times

WEST POINT, N.Y., July 24-With the number of Wet Point cadets officially accused of cheating approaching 200 and likely to go higher, h5united States Academy is facing some unexpected morale and administrative problems.

One of the more surprising effects of the continuing dispute, according to Army lawyers who supported the accused cadets at an unusual news conference yesterday, was a recent decision by those charged to resist feeling disgraced.

Cadets charged with violating the bonor code are customarily separated from their classmates. Those accused of being involved iin the current cheating candal are spending the summer in a provisional detachment known as "the penal colony."

Recently, one of them said, they decided to organize themselves—"the way West Point taught us," another of them said—by seeking knowledgeable counsel and by improving their appearance and their attitude.

An Army lawyer said: "They noticed they were not getting haircuts, because nobody cared. They were accepting the prisoner mentality. They decided then to be the best-groomed, best-dressed guys on the post. If the idea was to yell on a reveille run, they would yell louder than anyone."

This apparently improved esprit was indicated yesterday at the news conference by the scores of accused seniors who filled the room wifth cheers and applause for the balf-dozen among them who chose to charge the Academy publicly with unjust prosecution.

They were represented by Michael T. Rose, an Air Force Academy graduate and former military lawyer who is an expert on academy honor codes. He has organized the West Point lawyers into research teams.

The cadets, who have formed their own internal chain of command, and Mr. Rose were supported by Army lawyers such as Arthur Lincoln, wbo said later, "I used to feel that honor code violators should be beaved out, but not anymore, not in this case anyway with the way the Academy is trying to railroad them out of here through selective prosecution." Wes Point's management problem will become more serious as the summer continues "We have teaching obliga-tions," Captain Lincoln said, "and the Academy, in attempt-ing to complete prosecutions by the end of August, has been the end of August, has been trying to speed things up by getting cadets to incriminate themselves, for example, or by restricting lawyers from the initial review panels." An extra 52 lawyers were assigned to West Point several weeks accound 50 more are on weeks agoand 50 more are on call. With new names being added every week, bowever, there is considerable doubt that prosecution will be concluded by Labor Day. Forty-eight cadets were orig-inally charged with comparing answers last March on a takebome project in electrical engineering. Complaints that West Point was hiding the true scope of the prohibited collabo-ration led to a reexamination, and the number rose to 160. Of the 182 implicated so far, seven have resigned and only 58 have gone before officer boards, with guilty verdicts sustained in 40 cases. But at least one profescsor and two prosecutors have joined the cadets and several Army defense lawyers in say-ing that there were actually ing that there were actually 300 to 600 cadets involved. The superintendent, Lieut. Gen. Sid-ney Berry, has rejected allega-tions of a cover-up, saying that new names were being investi-ment are they anneared in gated as they appeared testimony. Academy officials are tempting to persuade Army of-ficials in Washington, meanwhile, to relieve their adminis-trative burden by waiving the trative burden by waiving the active-service requirement fac-ing any junior or senior ex-pelled for an honor violation. The academy initially at-tempted to persuade Secretary of the Army Martin R. Hoff-mann that it was the cadets themselves who sought this re-lief by having the Army lawlief by having the Army law-yers sign a petition that would have read as follows: "We the undersigned attor-neys at the United States Mili-tics Academy feal that if the tary Academy feel that if the two-year enlisted services in-curred by cadets who resign during their hird and fourth years were waived by the Secretary, there would be a res-ignation of between 50 and 80 percent of those cadets present-ly pending appearance before boards of officers. This opinion is based on our own observation and talks with those cadets presently charged." In fact, more than 95 percent of the 100 on campus cadets polled last week by one lawyer indicated a desire to stay on at the Academy. The proposed pe-tition had inferiated the attorneys, especially the last sen-tence, indicating it was the cu-dets themselves who sought resign it. Since then the Academ has made the same proposal on its own.

26 GAMING CONTROL BY STATES URGED

Panel Favors New Federal Law to Effectuate Plan

Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, July 24-A Government commission has recommended that the states be given the power to determine what forms of gambling may take place within their borders. In its second interim report, the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling proposed the "enact-ment of a Federal statute specifically empowering the states to regulate gambling." It said it had found "no overriding national reason" for Congress to prohibit or encourage gambling in the United States.

In line with its general proposal, the commission specifically recommended that the states "be permitted individually to levy whatever taxes they consider proper on legal gambling concerns." Such taxes, it said, "should preclude the imposition of Federal tax-ation," including income, excise and occupational stamp taxes. The commission found that The commission found that "the income tax statutes relating to gambling have proven ineffective, as a revenueproducing measure, ss a deter-rent to illegal gambling, and as directed against organized crime.'

It also found that "the efforts of the Federal Bureau of Inves-tigation and the Department of Justice with respect to either a diminution in the volume of illegal gambling or an impact on organized crime have been singularly unsuccessful." The commission urged that "the primary authority for gambling enforcement be trans-ferred to state law enforcement agencies.'

The belief underlying the group's recommendations was that state governments reflect their constituents' needs and desires more accurately than does the Federal Government, which is further removed from the people," and which, there-fore, should not "substitute its judgment for that of the states."

The general proposal in in-rrease the role of the states in cambling administration would codify what is already "de facto policy," the commission said, but with the advantage of "removing doubt about the scope of state jurisdiction."

Acknowledging that some of its specific proposals might be "highly controversial," the commission expressed its hope that public reaction to the interim report would help deter-mine its final recommendations, which will be sent to the President and Congress in October.

The 15-member commission. composed of four senators, four representatives and seven public members, has been studying the national policy toward gambling since January 1974.

(AP)—Federal District Judge June L. Green ordered the Federal Bureau of Investiga-tion Friday to search the files of its 59 field offices for any information on Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and report back to ber within 21 days. The Rosenbergs were exe-cuted in 1953 after being con-victed of transmitting atomic secrets to the Soviet Union. Their sons, Robert and Michael Meeropol, who use the name of the couple who adopted them, have been seeking to reopen the case in hopes of clearing their parents' names.

Judge Green also ordered that a number of bureau of-ficials submit to questioning by lawyers for the two Rosenberg sons. She named specifically Thomas H. Bresson, Thomas Lenehan, John E. Andrea Doria Speculation And Legends Will Not Die

By WERNER BAMBERGER

Twenty years ago today, the 29,500-gross-ton Italian luxury liner Andrea Doria and the Swedisb passenger sbip Stockholm collided in the Atlantic. The Andria Doria sank the follow-ing morning, and 52 lives were lost

Port Notes in the accident. lo the intervening two decades. speculation has cootinued on the cause of the accidant. And there still are legends of a treasure trove aboard the Doria and recurriog talk of Responsibility for the sink-ing has oever been fixed by a court of law. The litigation growing out of the accident was terminated by out-of-cburt settlements, which in-cluded $6 million for third-party losses. Admiralty-law sources and others familiar with the acci-dent attribute the disaster to these specific causes:

fimproper radar procedure on the Doria. Failure by the Italian ship to ballast her empty fuel tanks, thus diminishing the atability of the liner.

CA missing watartight door leading to the Doria's engine room. GFailure by the Doria to turn to ber right in a situatioo where two ships meet head on, or nearly head oo. At the last moment the Doria turned to her left.

What went down with the Doria in valuables and cargo can no longer be determined because there are no longer any copies of her cargo. The only item of value that definitely can be documented as having gone down with the ship is a $200,000 handbuilt automohile, made in Italy for the Chrysler Corporation. The vehicle, called the Norseman, was e bighly so-phisticated prototype with advanced construction and Angineering features. Will the Doria ever be raised? Most maritime observers doubt it, and point out that she lies in 225 feet of water some 60 miles off Nantuckei Island—a depth too great for conventional salvage.

price, she would hring a lit-tle under $2 million, from which would have to be deducted the cost of salvage and the cost of repairing her sufficiently for towing to a breaker's yard in Spain or in Taiwan. On that basis, shipping ob-servers feel she would turn out to be a loser again.

Foreign import trade by sea and air through the Port of New York increased substantially in the 1976 fiscal year. Fred R. Boyett, regional commissioner of customs, reported last week that customs reveoues in the year ended June 30 increased 9.46 percect to $1.49 billion from 1.4 billion in the preceding annual period.

The bulk of the increase was accounted for by more activity at Kenoedy loternational Airport, where cutoms collections rose hy 22.9 per-cent, from $334 million in the 1975 fiscal year to $410.6 million io fiscal 1976.

Collections at the piers in-creased by 3.2 percent, to $939.6 million from $910.1 million. The grand totals also include customs activity at Perth Amboy, Newark aod

Albany. The year's activity alao brought a "fringe-benefit" oot included in the totals.

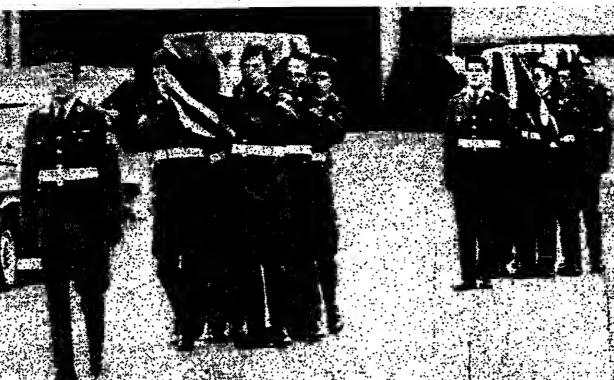

Mr. Boyett said one-tenth of a pound of heroin, 163.7 pounds of cocaine, 4,542 pounds of hashish, 3.965.4 pounds of marijuana and 9.259,371 tahlets of other drugs, such as barbiturates [come the center of an ecologiand LSD, were seized and confiscated during the 1976

New York Cuts Welfare Spending

New York City's Human Resources Administrator, J. Henry Smith, announced what was described as "the successful completion of the first of seven programs aimed at reducing city welfare expendences by $20 mllion in the current fiscal year." "This initial program," the anoouncement said, "has resulted in the reclassification of 2.52 cases from the home relief category (which is financed entirely by state and city money) to the aid-to-depecdent children category (in which the Federal Government pro-vides 50 percent of the financing). As a result, Mr. Sruth said, city tax levy expeoditures will be reduced by $3,725,-000 n the 1976-77 fiscal year.

Off-Duty Policeman Is Shot

An off-duty police officer was shot in the right thigh in a traffic dispute with two men at an intersectioo in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn sbortly before 6 A.M. yesterday. The officer, Joseph Molloy, 36 years old, was reported in good condition at Coney Island Hospital. A police spokesman said that the officer, in a van, was cut off by two men in a sports car on S6th Street near 17th Avenue. After an exchange of words, the passenger in the sports car fired at the officer with a .25-caliber pistol. The two men, described as in their 20's, then fled in their car.

_______family/style In a Life of Firsts, She Has Few Regrets

By NAN ROBERTSON She was painted six times by Rouault and three times by Dufy; she photographed Monet, Maillol, Pirandello, Prokofiev, Saint-Exupery; a bust of her wearing an Agnès hat is in the Prado in Madrid; she founded the first American illustrated press service in Europe; she was the first foreign correspondent to capture the coming of the Russo-Finnish War, her pictures of children uprooted by the Nazi invasions of Europe broke Franklin Roosevelt's heart and made Winston Churchill lift the Atlantic Blockade so that Red Cross ships with $4,000,000 worth of help could reach them. She is Therese Bonney, born Mabel Bonney of Syracuse, N.Y. She is 82, and she is a fantastic woman. At the moment the fantastic woman is getting a doctorate of law in gerootology at the Sorboone, is fresh from a series of invitational lectures at Colgate University in Hamiltoo, N.Y., and is looking forward to an exhibition based oo her life and career at the Museum of the City of Paris.

Due to open this fall, it will be called "An American -Witness of Her Time." Miss Bonney stopped hrief-ly in New York recently, at the apartment of friends in the Ritz Tower Hotel, on her way back to Paris. Stooped hut full of sparkling life, she wore a red ribbon in her barely grayish hair. On her hlouse was a red rosette from the Légion d'Honneur. She was 40 when France gave it to her "I have made my head-quarters in France since 1918, hut I am not an ex-patriate," she said. "I am the dean of the American press corps in Paris. Nobody outdates me,"

Memories of New York

She gazed out the window at the towers of Manhattan. New York is full of memories—such memories. The things I failed to do," she said, and then her voice, just for a moment, lost its hriskness

She was 24 when she first weot to Paris and found herself, almost literally over-night, a sensation. Miss Bonney was, for that time and place, an immense raritythings, whether those things had to do with the destiny of nations or merely the a youog American woman, an iotellectual with degrees from the University of California, Harvard and Columbia, a candidate for a doctorate of letters at the Sorbonne. And she was heauti-

"The people treated me like Pocahontas. They trailed me around everywhere and called me 'La Belle et Grande Américaine,'" she said. At the invitation of the Freech Government, she picked 133 students to fill the scholarships offered by Smith, Wellesley, Vassar and other women's colleges in the United States the United States. Her oral defense of her Sorbonne thesis, on the sub-ject of "Ethical Ideas in the Theater of Alexandre Dumas," drew coverage in the Paris press.

"But I suddenly realized that I was getting all my experieoce of life through hooiss," she recalled. "I wanted real contacts with the raw material, with the men and women who made up the colorful, stimulating pageant of modern European life. 1 dido't want to he merely a looker-on. So I conceived the idea of taking "Pictures with Ideas," she called them. "I only took pictures of people whom I considered were doing vital amusing of them." Statesmen, cabaret singers, furniture designers, artists, dressmakers; she photographed them all.

Some became her friends. Madeleine Vionnet, the inventor of the hias cut, was an intimate: Miss Bonney still has a 1921 Vionnet sheath worked with tiny flowers ("Today it would cost a fortune to reproduce it if you could get the handwork done") and a sweater Schiaparelli later designed just for her. Lurçat gave her his first tapestry design; it was em-broidered hy his mother.

Miss Bonney furnished her Paris studio in Art Deco style and still works behind a forged iron desk created hy Pierre Chareau. Dufy was fas-cinated hy her and Rouault could oot paint her enough, it seemed. But when she saw her first Dufy portrait she said: "Dufy, I don't have a double chin." "So," she said, "he took his hrush and added another one.' Dufy saw her off at the train carrying her to Finland in 1939, when she sensed war was hrewing. "We may never see each other again," he told her, and gave her a small oil of a nude. She carried it in her knapsack, then and on later hattlefjelds. On Dec. 11, 1940, the Muis not interested in what the war does to or with soldiers. She will focus her lens on the aftermath of war-its effect on people, their lives, their homes their posse their hope and their despair. This is what Therese Bonney did. The impact of her devastating pictures of the imnocents of war, later col-lected in the book, "Europe's Children," helped leas to the foundation of UNICEF after World War IL

Adopted a Child It was never enough. She adopted and commandeered food and clothes for a village in Alsace, which was 85 percent destroyed in the Battle of the Colmar Pocket. Miss Bonney's sharp brown eyes fell on "a little peasant boy, 10 years old, and I adopted him for my-self, not for any particular reason. There were other children partners more an children perhaps more ap-pealing, more intelligent. His father was a tender of vines."

She entered him in a lycée and the teachers said, "there's nothing to be got-ten out of him," but she and he persisted. He won a scholarship to the University of Strasbourg, went on to the élitist National School of Administration and married the daughter of an industrialist. "He is a technocrat now, with a big position, one of Giscard's men." Miss Bonney said, with a touch of scorn and sadness. "He has not kept my letters."

"Giscard" is Valery Gis-card d'Estaing, the President of France. 'About Love'

She was asked whether She was asked whether she had ever married, or committed herself for a long time to another person. "No," she answered, "I never did. A young Australian journalist asked me recently, "What did you do about sex?" I told her, 'I didn't do anything about sex, I did something about love.'"

The American alligator has once again poked its scaly head. out of the swamps. Once considered near extinction, the intrusive reptile—as evidenced by its inclination to spurn the swamps for more comfortable surroundings has apparently made a comehack.

The Fish and Wildlife Service calls the present alligator popu-lation of 650,000 a "dramatic" increase. The National Wildlife Federation, ignoring the more skeptical wildlife conservation groups, has joined the Federal agency in hailing the comeback as an example of how the Federal Endangered Species Act contributes to the recovery of animal populations thought at one time to be close to extinction.

"In some ways this has been a success story." a spokesman for the National Wildlife Fed-eration said. "It demonstrates the effectiveness of the law." The alligator was placed on ... the endangered species list in six southern states in 1967 when the Federal act was adopted, and according to the Fish and Wildlife Service, its population has mushroomed from the 52,000 estimated in a 1970 census. As a result, the Federal agency has recommended shift-He Shot at Teen-agers ing the alligator from an "en-species. merce. Lewis Regenstein of the Fund, for Animals, a Washington based conservation group, questioned the Fish and Wildlife Service's motives. He charged that the proposal was not based on an accurate count of the population but rather on pressure from landfill developers and buyers that have forced the reptile from its natural habitat

However, a spokesman for the Fisb and Wildlife Service's. regional office in Atlanta argued that the increasing alligator population needed to

Judge Suspends Sentence in Interest of Mercy

By ARNOLD H. LUBASCH A 30-year-old paraplegic whn pleaded guilty to a substantial narcotics charge has received a suspended sentence from a Fedral judge who said that the law shauld not be "remorseless, implacable and without mercy." The judge Marvin E. Frankel, gave the suspended sentence in District Court in Manhattan last. Thursday to Sylvester Mattox, a narcotics defendant whn has been a paraplegic since 1971 when was injured while fleeing from kidnappers. Mr. Mattox pladed guilty last April to having participated in a narcotics conspiracy involving what—Judge Frankel described as "a large-scale whnlesale and retail husiness in heroin and cocain" in early 1971 before his injury and paralysis.

The judge observed that "the defendant was kidnapped, per-haps in connection with his criminal involvements, subject to various brutalities and final-ly injured desperately when he jumped from a two-story window in an effort in escape." "Since that episode." the judge added, "he has been a paraplegic confined to a wheel-chair."

15-year Maximum

Mr. Mattox could have been sentenced to a maximum nf 15 years in prison on the narcotics charge and an additional one year on a tax charge, but Judge Frankel released him and put him on probation for three years. In an eight-page opinion ex-plaining the suspended sent-ence, Judge Frankei said that a prison sentence could serve the purposes of "making the defendant 'pay' and reaffirm-ing the community's outrage against the hehavior in ques-tion." tion." But he said that "a society that sets an example of naked, pitiless vengeance will not promote respect for the law or compliance with the law's dictates."

"The line between sternness "The line between sternness and cruelty cannot be seen with mathematical precision," the judge continued. "It must be espied by whatever night we can find. When the balance is uncertain, our law, like our professed morality, tells us to err on the side of mercy." Judge Frankel, who is widely regarded as an authority on sentencing, attracted vehement sentencing, attracted vehement criticism recently from those who said he was unduly lenient in giving a four-month sentence to Bernard Bergman, the 64-year-old nursing home figure who pleaded guilty to partici-pating in a Medicaid fraud that allegedly involved $1.2 million Mr. Mattox, a Vietnam War veteran from Irvington, N. J. was described as "economically self-sustaining" because of veterans' pension funds as well as a laudromat business and some real estate that he owns.

Others Were Acquitted

While Mr. Mattox pleaded guilty, six other defendants in the same narcotics case were acquitted in a trial, Judge Frankel said, adding that Mr. Mattox was "a minor figure compared to several who have gone scot-free."

The judge noted that the Pro-bation Department had recommended not sending Mr. Mattox to prison and that the Federal to prison and that the Federal prosecutor had recommended six months as a "relatively leni-ent" sentence in view of the defendant's physical condition. However, Judge Frankel said, if Mr. Mattox was "wheeled into prison" to serve a sen-tence, "the defendant's presence would tell his fellow inmates its the law is not merely rethat the law is not merely re-instances, but remorseless, im-placeble and without mercy." "It may be of interest to consider this case in thinking about recurrent proposals for nandatory minimum sen-lences," he said, nuting that a nandatory minimum could have prevented him from giving a suspended sentence to Mr. Mat-

"Unless the power to dis-riminate is left somewhere, the infinitie is left somewhere, the priminal law tends to produce monstrosities," the judge said, idding: "There is a need for pleaner, more uniform, more humane standards, but there will remain always a need for hudgment."

SARATOGA, N. Y. In the beginning, which was only II years ago, the theater would have many empty seats, and you could hardly give the tickets away. Saratoga was famous for Dutch cluis, mineral springs and old memories, and Arabesque was probably the name of some horse. Now Saratoga has not exactly surrendered to ballet, but the seduction is advanced, and local people who might otherwise drive over to Albany to ponder the Mall frequently go to the Performing Arts Center instead. The other day, a matinee for "The striking because "Nutcracker" is supposed to be for Christmas, and where do you find enough people here to go to a matinae, anyway? Dance and Saratoga are now entwined.

The company that brought dance bere, of course, is the New York City Ballet, which first showed up on July 9, 1966, to do "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and has been returning every summer since. This summer it will be bere until July 31.

Clearly, the Mae West mystique still plays. If she notes one trying to see beneath the make-up, she's cool: there are flews now, but hardly a dowsger's. As if asked, she remarks, "I never had nothin' lifted. Never had to. Because I never smoked. Cigarettes do disgustin' things to the fscial muscles." Paul regards her uxoriously as she sits. "Sextette," she explains, was first staged in the early sixties in Chicago and Miami, and since then, several movie studios have considered it, "but they always messed around with my writin', see, tried to rewrite my dialogue. They ruined it on me."

Irving Rapper, the seasoned director who steered Bette Davis through "Now, Voyager" and John Hansen through "The Christine Jorgensen Story," will put Miss West through her paces in "Sextette." The producers, Dan Briggs and Robert Sullivan, who've never done a film be-

How odd it is that so little is written about art museums-so little, I mean, about the actual experience one acquires in them, about the values they embrace, about the way they function in our culture and the way they have come to shape our thinking about art and the place it occupies, or fails to occupy, in our lives. There is probably no other institution of comparable importance in our society that has inspired so little serious thought, so little in the way of philosophical reflection, sociological analysis or critical study. The literature on the subject is so meager that it can scarcely be said to exist. More money and more people are drawn to museums than ever before in our history-and there are more museums drawing them yet the ideas governing these remarkable institutions are seldom examined outside the board rooms or curatorial offices where decisions are made that affect our entire culture.

Everyone knows that museums have changed, but how little attention has been paid to the nature of the change. The sacred hush, the slightly churchy atmosphere, the very air that we used to breath in the museum—compounded, it seemed, of piety and dust—are gone, but what has taken their place? Museums today are cleaner, brighter, more cheerful places than they once were, but what has happened to the objects in them, and what has happened to the way we are directed to look at them? What has happened to the way museums now educate the eye?

Go to almost any art museum today, and what is the first thing likely to engage your attention? Not, more often than not, a work of art. Either just before or just after handing over the price of admission, the museum visitor confronts the amazing cornucopia of the sales desk, often nowadays expanded into a sizable shop, where the eye is filled with a numbing abundance of what can only be called counterfeit art—posters, postcards, reproductions ("suitable for framing"), books, pamphlets, guides, souvenirs and expensive replicas of the works to be seen in the museum galleries or in some other museum's galleries. Although the whole point of going to an art museum is to see something that cannot be seen elsewhere, our attentioo is straightaway diverted to things that can be seen elsewhere, that can be taken home under one's arm or in one's porket.

Thus, we come to the museum in order to see what we call—with, perhaps, too little consciousness of what the word signifies—the work of art, but what we see first is likely to be work of another kind: the work of printers, publishers and pedagogues, of designers and manufacturers, of that vast industry that services our need for information about art and for counterfeit representations of it.

I am not myself disposed to question this need, but I think it is important-and now more important than ever-to distinguish it from the primary function of the museum, which is to show us the real thing. The reasons for the existence of this vast industry in the production of secondary art experieoces are neither mysterious nor reprehensible. For the public, these counterfeit materials serve, first of all, an important educational function. They impart information not otherwise easily come by. They serve, too, a kind of auxiliary esthetic functioo in revivifying our memory of what we have seen or in exciting our expectation about what, given the opportunity, we may expect to see. It is only when the counterfeit is mistaken for the real thing-when the work of the industry is somehow construed to be an authentic representation of the work of the artist-that this husy commerce in art souvenirs becomes worrisome. Art reproductions are, in some respects, the esthetic equivalent of pinups and pornography, and an esthetic sensibility nourished exclusively or primarily on such ma-terials is abont as much in touch with the reality of can be said to be in touch with things love

States and the second second

hlight of the Shakespeare season in England is watching Ian McKellen switching from Romeo, left, to in 'The Winter's Tale'."

> STAGE VIEW MEL GUSSOW

The Versatility of British Actors Can Be Dazzling

Shakespeare season io England, not only at -Avon, but also et Chichester, at the National gents Park, in the West End, and at the new heater in north London. This month ooe could phens's "Othello," Alan Badel's "Richard III," s "Hamlet" and Donald Sindeo's Benedick lo oout Nothing." In common, these actors are r their roles, but age never seems to deter from challenging themselves or Shakespeare result is profitable.

a highlight of this busy Shakespeare season a at Stratford, switching from a boyish Romeo cootes in "The Winter's Tale." As Romeo, he a dashing duelist and lover. As Leontes, he obsessive presence, a stern klog warped by There are moments when McKellen's Romeo in its brooding intensity and wheo his Leontes ng Lear. In each case, the actor's seriousness add, immeasurably to the drama. He makes is characters-even the paranoiac Leontes.

-temperamentally as well as physically-that, seeing his performances on successive days, one is caught by surprise: is that really McKellen as Leontes, or has some other, older member of the Royal Shakespeare Company borrowed his nama for the occasioo? Then we remember McKelleo's other recent performances-in Chekhov's "The Wood Demon" and, especially, last season in Londoo io David Rudkin's "Ashes" (as a contemporary husband, desperately, bumiliatingly, eager to father a child); the actor's range is enormous. Certainly he is one of the most versatile and compelling actors of his generation.

In both "Winter's Tale" and "Romeo and Juliet," he has been surrounded by excellent, supportive players (particularly John Woodvine, David Waller and Barbara Leigh-Hunt).

As co-directors, John Barton and Trevor Nunn seem to regard "Winter's Tale" as a folk tale, a child's-eye view of a paradoxical adult world. The simplicity and innoceoce

McKellen'a transformation between plays is so arresting help us to lesp the steeplechase jumps in character and mood. We are asked to accept Leontes'a jostant cooversioo to misanthropy-his turnabout from wise and faithful husband, friend and king, into wrathful accuser, imprisoning his wife and exiling his newly born daughter. The magical recovery of the daughter, the return to life of the wife, the geoerous happy ending are treated as myth-a symbolic actiog out what would be, by any realistic measure, impossible. of Perhaps my admiration for McKellen's Romeo is heightened by the fact that this was the second production of the play I saw this summer, and the first, at St. George's Theater, was woefully inadequate. St. George's is a recently cooverted church that resembles Shakespeare's Globe Theater. Physically, this is an impressive building, although the sightlines and acoustics are faulty. Beginning with "Twelfth Night" and "Romeo and Juliet," St. George's plans to do every play on the Shakespeare list. I hope that this "Romeo" is not typical of the company's work.

A permanent set has been installed on the broad stage, and this is the first mistake. Verona looks like e colooy of small Swiss chalets, divided by shower curtains. It is impossible to tell the difference between the Montagues and the Capulets, except for the fact that the Mootagues live in a chalet stage left and the Capulets live in a chalet staga right. Sarah Badel is an acceptable Juliet, hut Peter McEnery is a petulant, peevish Romeo; one oever has the feeling that these two are unalterably in love. The actress playing the nurse is too young and too raucous-ao annoying husybodyand the actor playiog Friar Lawrence makes him an inept

In contrast, the Trevor Nunn and Barry Kyle production of "Romeo and Juliet" at Stratford is polished and direct. We can feel the emotional tug between McKelleo and Frances-ca Annis. Despite McKellen's actual age, these are adoles-cents, inspired by a romantic vision and torn by parental pressures. Juliet's scenes' with her father (Mr. Woodvine) have a particular urgency, as he shifts from paternal indul-gence to blistering outrage. Where St. George's Friar Lawrence severed the drama, Stratford's Friar Lawrence (Mr. Waller) knits it together. Mr. Waller's well-meaning churchman is trying his mightiest to be pragmatic and moral-and is helplessly blockaded by fate.

This summer's innovation at Stratford is a new quasi-permanent set by John Napier and Chris Dyer, which reuses "joists and planks" from previous prodoctions, seems to thrust the stage further into the audience, and puts part of the audience oo stage in hoxes behind the actors. This makes the large house seem more intimate, which is especially behpful in "Much Ado about Nothing," clearly the crowdpleaser of the season because of Dooald Sinden.

As might be expected, Sindeo, a superb clown, plays up to the audience one could not imagine him acting in an empty theater-and it faps laughs out of his baod. His is a broad ebullient Benedick. As cootrasted to Sam Waterston (the Benedick of most receot New York memory) this is ao entirely different-character in an extremely different play. Sinden's Beoedick is no youthful ironist hut a confirmed old bachelor who finally decamps from his smug existence because of flattery. His head swivels wheo his friends tell him that Beatrice loves him.

As director, John Barton has transplanted the play from Messina to India. Soldiers are home from battle, and, immediately, we feel the heat, see tha servitude of tha colonials, and anticipate the decline of the Empire. Dogberry has beeo conceived of as a bumbling, word-cruoching Indian-Gunga Din as played hy Peter Sellers (actually he is John Woodvine io disguise). The ootioo is ioterestiog, prohably more so for the English, but the performances, except for Sinden's and Woodvine's, are pallid. For example, the actors playing the headstrong Claudio and the machinating Doo Pedro seem interchangeable (what we miss most from the recent New York production is Donglass Watsoo's urbane Don Pedro). Even Judi Dench as Beatrice is no match for this Beoedick. With winks, nods, double-takes and asides to the audience, Sinden makes "Much Ado" into a graceful one-man comic joust-"Much Ado about Sinden."

Sinden conquers Benedick, but back in Loodon at the Natiooal Theater, Albert Finney is vaoquished by Hamlet. This should have been an exciting performance (one thinks) of his "Luther" and "Tom Jones"), but, somehow, it seems half-hearted, as if the actor's mind were elsewhere-perhaps on Marlowe's "Tamburlaine," which he is scheduled to do]. in the fall for Peter Hall. As Hamlet, he lacks litheness, physically and emotionally, arbitrarily hurtling through some soliloquies, blurring the language, and offering no indication of a coocept. Somewhere in Peter Hall's weighty production, there must be a purpose other than to present a leading? actor in an uncut "Hamlet" in the nation's first theater. Perhaps the director and the actor envision a commoner; prince. If so, the vision has not beeo realized. Watching s Finney, we recall Nicol Williamson's "Hamlet." which brought ? the Dane down to earth without devaluating Shakespeare. Wolter Kerr is on vacation and ample figure-'T'm going on my annual diet oext Monday, I swear I am"-Weston considers himself an actor who plays comedy, rather than a comedian, although he numbers among his Hollywood friends Doo Rickles and Miltoo Berle. 'Milton keeps saying. 'Why don't you just admit you started in the mountain?" he chuckles. "But I didn't. I don't have anything against comedians -they're very gifted people. But I think if I played a club and somebody heckled me, I'd just cry and walk off the stage. I couldn't take it. I'm too sensitive.

"I need to be liked. I'm the king of paranoia. If people look at me cross-eyed. I get nervous-I have to be liked. Not only by the audience, but If we didn't. I doo't think I could stay on."

If Weston is a devotee of the comedy of hard knocks, it might be because he suffered more than a few of them growiog up. He says he always loved acting, but 'waso't what you'd call your matinee idol, cosmetically speaking." Born in Cleveland, the son of a shoe repairman, he remembers the days when his father brought home $10 a week and the family was on Home Relief. "During tha Depressioo, my brother and I used to go to the movies to escape a miserable, boring existence. I was hypnotized by those shadows on the screen. I Identified with the character actors - Wallace Beery, Eugene Pallette, Edward Arnold, Frank Morgan. You'd see a Clark Gable once or twice a year, but the character actors were always there, like glue holding the films together."

Westoo was something of a character himsalf in public school, and one of his teachers convinced his father that there might be some taleot beneath the cuttiog up. Morris Weinstein-"I think he had a deep artistic bent, and be gave me a lot of encouragement"-took his I0-yearold son to the Cleveland Playhouse for an apprenticeship that was cut short in his late teens when the Army beckoned, After World War II, Weston came to New York to study at the American Theatre Wing on the GI Bill, holding down odd jobs, making the rounds, and eventually landing featured parts in Broadway plays of the '50s, including the 1956 musical, "Bells Are Ringing," in which tended. his wife, Marge, was standby for Judy Holliday. Westoo also worked in television io

New York, on such shows as the Philco Playhouse. But TV in New York seemed to be-falling apart. In Los Angeles, it was blossoming." So the Westons quit 'Belis Are Ringing" and took off for the coast in their oew Volkswagen, which crashed en route, turning over three times but somehow leaving Marge and Jack intact. "We flipped a coin to see if we should go on to Hollywood. Two out of three, it came up that we

"All

Weston might have been consigned to a. career of being a familiar hut unidentifiable face on the wide and small screens had it oot been playwright Terrence for McNally, a longtime fan whit insisted that Weston be cast as Gaetano Procio, the good-natured nebhish of sanitationman who unknow iogly flees to a homosexual bathhouse to escape his murderous brother-in-law in "This Ritz." "You seldom get the part you played on stage in the movie, too," Weston beamed, "but Terrence stuck with me all the way."

How long will be be staying oo with "California Suite"? 'Uotil it's oot working for me anymore. It's tough physically doing the show---yet start high, and have to get higher. The 'Terrible Power' of Critics Over Institutions

sibility." (Clive Barnes

ast weekend in Ottawa I book part in a conference regarding the relation of the critic to society, and also the responsibility, if any, of the critic toward the artist. I only caught the final session, but it did seem that one of the concerns of the conference was the relationship between the critic and what might be termed generally the cultural institution. How much should a critic view an institution simply as an event? Should he consider its aspira-tions and the pattern of its existence? Should he take into account its past and possible future as well as its present? Indeed, in general and simple terms, should be behave any differently toward the cultural institution than toward the isolated artistic event sponsored, hopefully for profit, by an entrepreneur? To me it is a fascingting subject, about which I have fairly strong views.

ANCE

The critic's function should basically be directed as much to the audience as to the artist, or cultural institution. Probably more. A dance critic is not meant to tell people how to dance, how to choreograph, or how to run a ballet company. By a deflecting inference he may inadvertently hint at soma of those things-but his intent surely should be to act as a guide to the audience, a bridge between the audience and the artist, an informed advocate trying to tell the public jury his view of right Judgment is within the gesture of the public. The critic merely states a case, offers his opinion, and hopes to assist understanding.

Of course, there are some critics who imagine themeives Moses. But most critics view their profession in some decent pride, with a perspective of immility and a precious grain of salt. To go to a performance and to say this was that, and that was this, is easy enough. Any critic may, of course, be wrong ("wrong," here, being used in the ongoing and inevitable context of the historic consensus of informed opinion), but such things are irrelevant. The major thing is villages known only to the people who live in them; and Saratoga and its environs, in turn, have touched the company. It is a pas de deux. For example, the dancers

Patricia McBride and Jeanerre Bonnefous who are husband and wife, have bought a house here. Anthony Blum and Shaun O'Brien have bought houses, too, and Suzanne Farrell has bought an island. There is now a bar on Broadway, which is Saratoga's big street, called "Critic's Choice," and here and there health food stores have opened. Almost certainly, they were inspired by the dancers. The horseplayers who made Saratoga famous never cared much for desiccated liver. Perhaps the biggest change in 11 years, however, has been the children. The company has always begun its season here with a week of to either "Nutcracker" or "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and both of them use children. Once, the children were almost all imported from tha School of American Ballet in New York. Now, ballet instruction has proliferated upstate, and the children, except for a very few, are no longer imported. They have learned to dance in Saratoga.

If an acquintan artist and a critic depends upon the critic giving the a constant stream of warm notices, the acqua from the critic's point of view, is one well lost. A who cannot handle such acquaintanceships should ke from them. But the relationship between a critic institution is far more tricky.

The only responsibility a critic has toward an ir artist is that of being fair and informed. But when f looks at the institution, there is, I think, a special ferent responsibility that might be called a social i bility. Mr. d'Amboise, a star, was standing in the parking lot outsida the stage door of the Saratoga Performing Arts Center. He was waiting for his wife, Carrie, who soon would show up driving an old Ford convertible with a bag of groceries on the hack seat. Lincoln Center has nothing comparable to the local parking lot; this one could be outside a suburban supermarket.

"Class and rehearsal, and then the pool. That's what Saratoga is," Edward Villella was saying in the parking lot. "Rosemary's Baby" and "The Exorcist" has satanophany paid off as lucratively as it's currently dolog with "The Omen" and, to a lesser extent, "The Devil Within Her," both movies of such ceremonious silliness that you may want to see them, if only to get a purchase on a public that this autumn will be exercising its quadrennial Constitutional rights to elect a President. If Old Gooseberry's name were on the ballot, there'd be no contest.

Both in "The Omen," a big-budget American film shot mostly in England with the augustly puzzled presence of Grego- Peck playing the American ambassador to the Court of St. James, and in "The Devil Within Her," a much cheaper

Satanophany is good box office these days as hordes of moviegoers flock to see the likes of Eileen Atkins in "The Devil Within Her" and Harvey Stevens in "The Omen."

English film with Joan Collins playing a frightfully grand ex-Soho stripper, Old Gooseherry is cuddly and cute enough to star in a series of baby-food commercials. Way back when, in the 1920's, the Devil was a woman. Today he's a little boy.

If you care about the welfare of films, of women and of little boys, these movies—to say nothing of the dozens of sequels already planned—represent a long step sideways onto the soft shoulders of puerility.

Satanism has always been an interesting though not very respectable form of movie myth. The subject was usually left to the B-picture makers, who occasionally threw up a first-class producer like Val Lewton, but it was never considered worthy of the attention of the makers of A-films. Roman Polanski's "Rosemary's Baby," which is more a comedy than anything else, started to change that, and all remaining doubts were swept away by the phenomenal success of William Friedkin's "The Exorcist," a movie that seemed pretty dreadful at the time but ooe that aloogside "The Omen" now looks like a work of cinematic art.

It's to overemphasize a point, I suspect, to say that this received interest in satanism represents what psychologists and sociologists describe as a need to externalize evil, thus to avoid individual responsibility. The fictiocal process itself is a way of externalizing ideas and feelings, the better to understand them. The existence of Satan is a part of our mythology. So too—it's now apparent—is our tolerance for solemnly pretentious, superstitious nonseose. 13

That may be taking "The Devil Within Her" and "The Omen" more seriously than they deserve, but not, I think, the public's gullibility in huying second-rate work.

Before the opening of "The Devil Within Her," Joan Collins has made the mistake of spurning the advances of an amorous dwarf (she doesn't love him "that way") sharing the bill with her in a London nightclub. In his humiliation the dwarf, whose supernatural powers obviously couldn't get him a date at the Palladium, curses Miss Collins, calling upon Old Gooseberry to see that she bears a monster child, which, after her marriage to an antique dealer, she does.

The evil child in "The Devil Within Her" is a devil, not the Devil, but before he is neutralized he manages to do away with dad, mum, the namy and the pediatrician. The moral of the movie: don't mess around with amorous dwarfs. The point of the movie: the attempt to create suspense as we wait for the characters to realize that the baby is possessed. Joan suspects almost immediately but she acts too late. Salvation comes in the person of Joan's sister-in-law, an Italian nun who is most of the time a research chemist but also an exorcist when the need arises.

"The Devil Within Her" is foolish and probably knows it. "The Omen" is like Gregory Peck's performance—dignified, grave and so hollow-headed it rattles. It takes as its text a bit of hilarious doggerel that David Seltzer, the screenwriter, would have us believe comes right out of the Book of Revelations (sic):

"When the Jews return to Zion/And a comet rips the sky/ And the Holy Roman Empire rises/Then you and I must die/ "From the eternal sea he rises/Creating armies on either shore/Turning man against his brother/"Til man exists no more."/

If you can possibly locate the Book of Revelations (sic), you may possibly locate this quote. It's nowhere to he found in the Book of Revelation, though.

In Seltzer's screenplay, which was directed by Richard Donner, a television director who has a superb way of dismissing any small detail that might give some semblance of cooviction to the proceedings, Robert Thorn (Peck) takes it upon himself to adopt an infant boy born in a Rome hospital the same evening that his own son has been born dead. Thorn, who is described in terms that evoke thoughts of the Kennedy family, is terribly regal in his bearing but he doesn't have moch opstairs. When a sinister priest suggests the switch in babies, Thorn agrees and explains that his wife Katherine (Lee Remick) should never know. Little does Thorn know that the being he has been conned into taking to his bosom is not just a devil, but Old Gooseberry himself, come to earth to take control, even if it has to be by Constitutional means.

Cut five years into the future when Thorn, Katherine and the boy, Damien, are living in London in splendor untroubled by any of the usual diplomatic duties. After one thing and another (the suicide of a nanny, the impalement of a junkie priest who tried to warn him, Katherine's miscarriage with a secood child), Thorn begins to suspect the kid's real identity. The suspicions are confirmed later when the message in Revelations (sic) is interpreted to mean that Old Gooseberry has, indeed, come to earth, now. The Jews have returned to Zion, and there was a comet. The Holy Roman Empire doesn't mean Holy Roman Empire at all but. the Common Market, ("A bit of a stretch," Greg says, but he's convinced), and "the eternal sea," someone else says portentously (and conveniently), is thought to mean "the sea of politics." Greg is not the quickest witted fellow at the Court of St. James but he knows a prognostic angury when he has one interpreted for him. He jumps into action, but, . . . Old Gooseberry triumphs in "The Omen" and well he might, considering the intelligence of the opposition.

It's no contest in movies as nuttily put together as "The Omen" and "The Devil Within Her," so why should they be so popular? It's to give the films credit for a seriousness they don't possess to suggest that they fill some spiritual needs. Could it be that they provide an outlet for all our pent-up batred of things like children, dogs, dwarfs and priests? Perbaps. Or, the answer may be much more simple: the reflection of vestigial longings for a real change in administration.

I had this yogi master travelin' with me for five years, I gave him a botel suite, a car, everything, but he never convinced me. Then one night a few years ago, I come into this room from my boudoir, and there was Mr. Kelly, sittin' right there where you are, on that couch. I screamed for Paul, who was in my chamber answerin' fan mail. Some of it's addressed just to Mae West, Hollywood,' and they deliver it. Anyway, Paul runs in, and Mr. Kelly vanished. She has witnessed other manifestations, too. Her deceased brother and pet woolly monkey appeared to her, separately, on the cormice of ber bedroom wall. "And several groups of hatdsome young men have come and stood beside my bed. I extended my hand to them, like this, and they disappeared."

The Cheshire smile, seductive murmur in the eilence following her remarks again imply the put-on. But evidently she is quite serious this time, at least about Reverend Kelly. "I was already workin' on his biography, see, an' be came back to show me there is an afterlife, so now I know." She sounded ntterly logical. Under the make-up, what may be dark spots of fatigue have appeared, yet she rises almost athletically. "Paul and gotta drive down t'the T beach now." She still maintains an elaborate Santa Monica house, and her ranch in the San Fernando Valley, but likes town best. "We go to pictures a lot, some 'a these modern styles are terrific. I like movies about strong women. I was the first liberated woman, y'know. No guy was gonna get the best of me, that's what I wrote all my scripts about."

he "Ring" cycle that is the big feature of the ninth Munich Festival has just concluded. It contained some interesting ideas and also the major trappings of what has come to be known as the neo-Bayreuth style. Has there been a "Ring" cycle anywhere since 1951 that is not stripped-down and symbolic? When Wieland Wagner sprang his "Ring" cycle on an unprepared world that year, every opera house immedistely got the message. The old order was out, On with the new. Besides, it was less expensive to stage the "Ring" cycle in the neo-Bayreuth manner.

It was amazing how closely the productions of the international opera houses adhered to the new party line. Directors and producers seemed literally afraid or ashamed to go back to the romantic Wagner of yore. To do so would mark them as unresponsive to the new thoughts of the brave new world. It all culminated in Herbert von Karajan's "Ring" cycle, which was so dark that hardly anybody could see what was going on. The Metropolitan Opera saw the new Karajan conception, and there were quite a few jokes about the amount of money, Karajan had spent to create invisibility, Yet Wieland Wagner's revolution is still going on, as wit-ness the Munich "Ring" cycle. Coming up, as these lines are written, is the 100th anniversary of Bayreuth, and a Frenchman named Patrice Cherean is staging a new "Ring" cycle there. The advance betting has it that many of Wieland Wagner's formulas will still be in effect. The neo-Bayrenth style is too firmly ensconced for any great change. There is still nobody around who would dare go back to the old days, with Fricka's rams, the rainbow bridge to Valhalla, Brünnhilde's horse, rocks that look like rocks, mountains that look like mountains, helmets with wings on them, armor, a fire in Hunding's hut. We may be in the beginnings of a romantic revival, but nobody is that romantic yet.

From July 10 to July 16 the four operas were given here, and there were a few surprises at the opening "Rheingold." Günther Rennert staged the cycle, and this was a production full of ideas that broke away somewhat from the neo-Bayreuth style. Despite a mostly have stage, there was a naturalistic feeling thanks to a skillful use of projections. In addition, Remnert was much more interested in character than in archetypes or mythos.

Even if some of Rennert's ideas, especially at the very nd, seemed to depart from Wagner's intentions, there was a facing of consistency. The movements of the characters were carefully delineated; this was a "Rheingold" that was almost a bailet. The giants (with elevated shoes to increase their height) were given shaven heads coming almost to a point, and they employed a lumbering kind of motion that for once seemed natural rather than let's-play-giant. Alberich an entirely different kind of locomotion, and he too had had been rehearsed to the point where it seemed natural. Loge came on stage with sliding motion; he flowed rather than walked, as befits the God of Fire.

Rennert worked out an inexorable line of on-coming doom. At the end of the opera, at least two figures on stage suddenly realized what was going to happen. Wotan, who had been talked into the mess by Loge, and who had been pretty stupid up to then, started thinking furiously shout how to salvage the situation. Rennert worked out an interesting grouping here, Donner starts his stentorian "He da! He da! He do!" aria. Everybody but two characters looked at him with anticipation. He is going to make the rainbow bridge to the new home of the gods. But Wotan has his back to Donner. He is lost in deep thought. And Logs keeps looking at Wotan with unusual interest.

When the Rhine maidens start their lament and Wotan dismisses them, it is Loge who is appalled, Rennert's direction makes it very clear that Logs wants Wotan to give the ring back to the maidens. But Wotan has his mind on other things. Probably he is thinking of the manner in which he will stock Valhalla with heroes to fight the forces of Niebelung evil. The curtain drops.

Now, this is not exactly what Wagner had in mind, Loge, as Wagner conceived him, is a half-god who is more annused than anything else. He is the smartest of the gods, the willest, and is going along for the ride. No matter what happens to Wotan and the others in the long run, Loge will know bow to take care of himself. But Rennert has his own ideas about Loge's character, the liberty he has taken works very well, and one is willing to go along with it. Loge after all does see further than Wotan. It is in the other operas of cycle that Rennert runs into the same kind of trouble the that the Wagner brothers and all their followers have experienced

It is all very well to strip the stage, but the baby has been thrown out with the bath water. For in the process of getting down to archetypes, of ignoring everything but psychological defenses, the libretto ends up often not making sense at all. The characters find themselves singlethings or events that are not happening on stage. In "Die Walkire," the neo-Bayrouth stagings drop so the sword has to light up by itself, if it indee up at all. In "Siegfried," the hero in the neo-Bayreuth has been observed singing about Britnshilde's armer the lady in question is dressed in nothing but a lon-In "Götterdämmerung" there is the apostrophe to the Grane, Brünnhilde's battle steed. Each of us has his De sistencies to chortle over as we attend the new way of the "Ring."

And Wagner, the most literal-minded of composen have been shocked. It is all very well to say that it i tant to bring Wagner into the 20th century. But wrong. He was not a 20th-century composer, gening he may have been: He was a late 19th-century 1. he may have been: He was a late 19th-century 1 and his musical speech was of the 19th century ; why the neo-Bayrenth stagings present an awkward my that, curiously, is not applied to other compos-don't hear much talk about binging Mozart operas 20th century; or Beethoven's "Fidelio"; or the o music of Bach. It is only poor Richard Wagner why from this esthetic cleavage: music that could have co from the 19th century coupled to a type of product features techniques and Freudian-Jungian interpretail much of the 20th

Another problem, though that cannot be blamed .. Bayreuth or Rennert, is the present state of Wagner Munich came up with a good Wotan, the Danish Leif Roar, but when the casting involves dramatic or heldentenors, we are in trouble on a world-wi

Two or three generations ago we had Wagner dr. tature of Flagstad, Leider, Larsen-Todsen, Mueller, 1 Stilckgold. Today there is only Birgit Nilsson. We ha the likes of Melchior, Althouse, Lorenz, Slezak, Totare none. Literally none. Which means that the gra line has largely disappeared from Wagner operas' not pleasant during the Munich "Ring" to hear and singers try but come nowhere near the basic des their role

Still, singing or no, neo-Bayreuth or no, a Wagna remains an overwhelming experience. Wagner is at as ever; there was not a seat to be had for the performances. Wagner created a new world in a conception, and today, 100 years after the world of the "Ring" cycle, we are still overwhelmed by t of the music and the vision of its creator. On to Bayreuth.

The Search for A Musical Utopia At Marlboro

By HELEN EPSTEIN

MARLBORO, VT. It is a rainy night and 75 professional musicians, their husbands, wives and children are gathered in the rustic ball that serves as a communal dining room here. At one table, the octogenarian Miec-zyslaw Horszowski, 24-yearold Cynthia Raim and 73year-old Rudolf Serkin are discussing rehearsal plans for the Bach Triple Plano Concerto which they will play with Alexander Schneider and the Mariboro Chamber Orchestra, Luis Batlle, director of the Kolischer Conservatoire in Montevideo, and Young-Uck Kim, the Korean violinist, are waiting on tables. A din composed of French, Japanese, Italian, Hungarian, Spanish, German, Hebrew, Russian and English soon reaches a forte. Then the fun starts, Young-Uck's face is suddenly splattered with cottage cheese. The Bach discussion is interrupted by the arrival of a deftly-aimed wad of napkin. Throughout the dining hall. people begin ripping up the paper tablecloths and throwing paper missiles with the eothusiasm of secondgraders, in what has become an evening ritual. "Some of it is pure fun, some of it is boredom, but most of it is release." explains, cellist Paul Tobias, 'You perform all day in these intense situations where the basic tenets of your musical beliefs are put to the test. There's a certain driven quality to seven weeks with 150 people isolated on a mountaintop in the middle of nowhere. Dinner is literally the anly time to let loose." The Marlboro festival is n ot a school. There are no private lessons, little practice time and no formal designation of student and teacher. Nor is it primarily a festival. There are only two public concerts per week, presenting less than five percent of the music . currently being studied. The fact is Marlboro is an annual attempt at a Utopian community and it has managed for over two decades to retain Its initial experimental quality. "Every summer is fresh because we work at becoming more like the republic of equals that is described in our publicity," says violinistviolist Philipp Naegele, who was one of Mariboro's first participants. "The paradox here is to balance selflessness with the n eed for self-assertion. The essence of Mariboro is the anti-personality cult: the collaborative effort is valued more than the embitions of the individual. An equility of technical proficiency is not assumed but an equality of attitude is. You tend to get disaffected in an orchestra, even in an aca-demic department or a solo career. But bere, there is really no one who questions the worth of the undertaking and who would not be willing to do almost anything to approximate it."

The experiment began inauspiciously in 1950, when Walter Hendricks, a former English professor at the University of Chicago and founder of Mariboro College, announced to the local press that his Vermont neighbors Adolf and Hermann Busch woodwind authority Marcel Moyse and his family and pianist Rudolf Serkin would direct a summer chamber music workshop on his tiny campus. The application procedure was bungled and all but four of the prospective students who made it to the top of the dirt road took one look, turned around and drove bome. The following summer, the musicians organized independently of the college and welcomed talented amateurs and students into a musical family which, from the start, offered a cross-section of the French, German, Viennese and Russian approaches to music. "Then, in 1957, Isaac Stern came up to play concertos." recalls Serkin, "He told me this could be a wonderful place but that we had to have a certain minimal level of competence. If one member of a quartet plays out of tune, it's ruined,' be said. 'even if they are the nicest people.' So I swallowed brass players on each instrubard and didn't invite some people back." The arrival of Casals in 1960 and the steady influx of virtuoso players-young and old-soon rendered the old student-faculty roles meaningless, and they were abolished at about the same time that the business end of the enterprise passed from the hands of emateurs to pros. At first, Seckin and a few friends financed Marlboro, through personal con-tributions and various makeshift projects. For a while there was a plan through which natrons could sit in on rehearsals but when they took to instructing the must cions as to tempi and style, that idea was scrapped. It was George Szell who introduced some order into Mariboro's business affairs, according to Serkin, when he ed. asked a former president of the Cleveland orchestra, Frank Taplin, to organize a board of trustees. One of their first achievements was to move performances from the 300-seat dining room into 660-seat concert hall built in 1962 and to put together a healthy endowment fund. Henze's First Opera in a Deca Seen in Londo

By JOHN ROCKWELL

LONDON Hans Werner Henze is one of the most highly regarded opera composers of the age, yet his "We Come to the River," first performed by the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, earlier this month, is his first opera in 10 years.

It is one more paradox in the life of a composer who has been comeshed in paradox since shortly after the Second World War, Now just 50 years old, Mr. Henze continues to be a study in contradictions - the German composer who lives in Italy and, increasingly, in England; the revolutionary who enjoys a most unrevolutionary lifestyle; the wildly eclectic modernist whom no stylistic camp can claim, The decade-long operatic

His last formal opera, "The Bassarids" of 1966, an enormously lavish, complex mythic drama, capped a steady series of stage works. They are difficult to pigeonhole stylistically, but all betray Mr. Henze's unusual craftsmanship and his intermittently effective gifts for parody and sensuous aural color. It was at the premiere of "The Besserids" at the Saizburg Festival that Mr. Henze had a sudden revelation. The whole enterprise seemed to me rather desperate," he said later to the British critic, Peter Heyworth, "I feit that it was time to out myself and my work into question and to detach myself from certain social rituals. I suddenly feit I had nothing." In the fall of 1967 Mr.

Henze befriended Rudi Dutschike, the West Berlin student leader, and began his forthright transition into a radical Marxist composer. Since then he has turned out a steady stream of smaller theater pieces and overtiv dramatic concert pieces that have provoked the expected booing and genteel riots that attend leftist provocations in the cultural strongholds of the European bourgeoisie." Mr. Henze evoided the opera house proper for 10 years because even he had doubts about the suitability of such hiatant symbols of the ancien regime for his new revolutionary music. Something changed his mind when Covent Garden's commission came along. "Since opera houses are the halls we have at our disposal now," he reasoned, "instead of blowing advance. them up, as Mr. Boulez has suggested, let's use them."

The Critic's 'Terrible Power' Over Institutions

more damaging than the critic who attaches himself to a cultural institution and becomes, in effect, its public rela-tions spokesman. He loses credibility, and even the organizatioo suffers from a damp swamp of overpraise. On the other hand, the critic needs to establish a climate where something can grow. He must not be kind, but also be must not be unduly rigorous. In fact, he must he realistic.

Say, for a moment, you are a dance critic in South Dakota. And someone has formed, oervously, tenuously and lovingly, a new, professional dance company. Now it would be perfectly possible to destroy this company by unencour-agement. It would also be perfectly possible to destroy this company by overencouragement. To achieve the first you have to point out at length it is not as good as New York City Ballet, which shows you are stupid-sophisticated, and to achieve the second you have to suggest that it is better than New York City Ballet, which makes you sophisticatedstupid. In both instances the critic is irrelevant and unhelpful.

We have seen the same thing happen in New York. For the most part critics have taken a responsible attitude toward New York City Ballet, and perhaps the City Center Joffrey Ballet. The modern-dance companies have been dealt with fairly fairly, with some decent appreciation of their possibilities and potentialities. But American Ballet Theater has had, over the past three decades or so, a fairly rough time. And when we look at theater and opera, there seems to have beeo a lack of respect for aspiratioo in connection with future achievement. Look at the way, for example, the New York critics, especially the self-appointed highbrows, treated Jules Irving's regime at Lincoln Ceoter's Vivian Beaumont Theater. It was ignorant and appalling. Coosider the way Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival is considered in bits, rather than a theater that has an overall plan, a total commitment to its community, and the hope of being a national theater, its obvious successes are lauded, its dismal failures are deplored, and its experiments are generally misunderstood. Few critics take into account what Papp is trying to do as a whole.

What I would like to suggest to critics is that they look at the overall pattern of an institutional group. Because of our lack of princes and their courts, wa in America are having to build our institutions the hard way. Generosity is called for. This does oot mean that critics should overpraise. Simply what it means is that critics should be loving toward the inherent possibilities of their own cultural community. They are part of it. They are oot living in ivory towers, they are people of the plains. They talk to the public,

The institutions themselves do not need an easy review Indeed, the more serious an institution is, probably the more stringent the review should be. But even a bad reviewthe worst review you can envisage-can be sympathetic. The critic needs to be free, maverick and honest. But he must not wilfully destroy the plaintive flowers of aspiration. He doesn't have to be easy, hut he doeso't have to be cutting. It is easy to be funny at the expeose of the unweaned. Any-one can be a Claudla Cassidy In Chicago. A critic has to wonder whether it is really in the best interests of his hopes.

But ultimately it appears a questionable endeavor, at least after a single hearing. Mr. Henze is, without any doubt at all, a composer of enormous potential, but age 50 seems the time for accomfor the delicately judged efplishment. It is beside the fect, particularly when he point to snipe, as so many have done, at the sincerity of his politics. What counts works with exotic instrumental color, remain unimpaired. Mariboro does not altogether escape the pressures of time and tension that are endemic to the music business hut the fact that it does at all is what hrings musicians back here year after year. "I find playing in the ensemble restrictive after a while," says Coheo. "I find I want to be exposed to different ideas, a different repertoire, and the stimulation that comes from both the older and younger people here. There is also a consideratioo for family that is atypical of other schools and festivals.

"I'm incredibly happy here," says violinist Young-Uck Kim. "During the winter, I work alone. I sit in airport lounges, take a plane somewhere, check into a hotel, practice, sleep and go to rehearsal. The conductor is husy. I talk to him for 20 minutes and he tells me what tempi he takes. It's happened that I didn't see the conductor at all before a performance. Here, you can discuss ideas at hreakfast, dinner, all the time. You can renew frieodships with people who vou doo't see because everyone travels so much. It's a very secure feeling."

At the same time he is very shrewd, ambitious and will not relinquish the slightest amount of suthority while wanting to convince others that he is perfectly self-effacing. But he sees through himself as well as through everyone else."

"He knows the necessity of constant change," says Luis Batlle. "He's always looking for ways to disturb things the equilibrium so won't stagnate."

Io fact, Serkin is spending great deal of time these days thinking about the future. "Where do we go from here?" he asks, in a rare momeot alone. When the films went on (above, John Glenn), the networks were helpless.

of her gobbling pills as though they were jujubes. I had to theirs. Eight years ago I interviewed a network TV execucramp in my brain.)

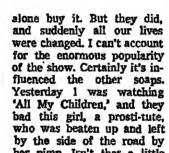

The nominating conventions are, obviously, the Olympics of electronic journalism. But at least the competitors have been there before. One needn't be an adept in any extrasensory voodoo to imagine the pressure on the provincials in the qualifying beats: the producer who has worked for six months on an hour-long documentary, and has to wait another three for e time-slot; the independent production company petitioning a network for acceptance; the freelance working temporarily for one of the TV "newsmagazines." Theirs is a skin of ego easily bruised, an electronic sweat, the anxiety of being marginal.

These maunderings were inspired by telephone calls, a recent cluster of them like the burst of a Gatling gun. The job of a freelance was on the line because of a newspaper review suggesting that he had improperly sprung an on-camera surprise while interviewing someone for a documentary segment. The head of an independent production company mobilized a battalion of public relations agents to explain himself. Another independent virtually begged for the critical attention that a network wasn't paying him. A network producer raged at an article that divided the credit for a program when the credit should have been individual end indivisible, even though the article bad rhapsodized about the program. Another independent producer called plaintively to disagree with one's mild reservations about her latest efforts.

Embarrassing, as is usual with telephone conversations. What do you say to someone who has called to declare that he or she rather more appreciates what he or she has done than you did? You mumble, and your diastolic pressure shoots for the moon. And your anxiety is a midget compared tive, having been told that he was guaranteed to say something appalling and quotable. He did. I quoted. He called the next day to say, "You made me look like a borse's [bleep]." No; God did. He promised that I would never again be invited to any CBS parties. I thought I would survive. Amazingly, I went on for the next eight years to write about television and go to CBS parties. Equally amazingly, he be-came more important than Barbara Walters. Is the telephone a kind of pep pill?

If so, it also sobers. TV reviewers tend to think of themselves as peripheral, even irrelevant, powerless to alter events or cloud men's minds. By the time our comment appears print, the object of it will usually have vanished or, if it persists, millions of other people will have seen it and already made up their own minds. We are read, if at all, by those seeking a confirmation, either of their own gut reaction to a new program or of their suspicion that we are jerks. That we can't change the world is partially compensated for by the feeling that we don't hurt anybody, either. Out of our imperial idleness comes merely chat, no more compelling than the opinion of the next lout on the next barstool. To be taken seriously by those for whom e license renewal is a permit for printing money-television is recession-proof; no matter what the networks do, profits go up-is to realize just how insecure the industry is. They are scared and that's scary, because the first victim of any such frightful stampede toward caution is the controversial program in news, public affairs and documentaries. The next victim is the public, whose sloth will go unpricked, whose slumber will be dreamless. I'm sorry, but we think about television because it is there-it is, in fact, most of our "there"-and opinion isn't a nurse.

f nothing else, television coverage of the Demo cratic National Convention was not skimpy. In Manhettan, at least, insatiable convention buffs had between 10 and 14 hours a day available for gluttonous consumption. Also in Manhattan, some viewers had access to two forms of cover-ge representing ultimate extremes. Network coverage, available to anyone with a TV set, offered a tightly structured package of live events, special features, commentaries and. mercials, all brought to the nation at a cost of millions of dollars. Alternate video coverage by a group called Image Union, available only to subscribers of Manhattan Cable, was completely unstructured, sometimes meandering into pointless and irritating corners, but often tripping into moments of brilliance. Its budget was obviously in the shoestring category.

Both of these extremes are legitimate and justifiable within the broad context of what is referred to, with or without irony, ae "electronic communications." The problem however, ia a curious neglect of coverage that would fall between these two points, particularly at the dead center of the convention itself. The network productions too often dabble only in impressions of a convention, eliminating any material that their news producers deem minor or boring. Instead, the audience is "entertained," supposedly, with the observations of anchormen, the interviews of floor reporters and the insights of special commentators. These contributions can be valuable, and probably would be quite effective in a limited format. But stretched over the long hours of a typical convention, they tend to be fetally flattened by vitable repetition and tedium.

One normally perceptive observer of TV was insisting, on a cable channel, that he detected significant differences between the techniques and styles of NBC and CBS, which were offering gavel-to-gavel coverage. Comparing CBS with The New York Times, he saw NBC as The Daily News. Perbaps watching TV for long stretches can temporarily impair one'a perceptions. In fact, any differences between the two networks were entirely superficial, rooted in the personalities of on-air talent. Overall content was remarkably similar -the same highlights, the same interviews, the same questions and the same answers. Basic coverage was being offered in duplicate, even in triplicate. The "edited" coverage provided by ABC was merely more of the same in a smaller time frame.

The viewer, then, is left not only with impressions of the convention, but, equally important for TV executives, with impressions of the reporters. It becomes significant the the NBC team of John Chancellor and David Brinkley worked exceptionally well together, combining an intelligent presentation of factual information with easy humor and occasional bite. It is unsettling to find Bill Moyers, formerly a kingpin in public-TV, reduced to a bit part on the CBS network, confronting and sometimes sharply debating Eric Sevareid at the special-commentary table.

rupted by a 6-year-old boy, standing by ber table, requesting an autograph and news of her TV father, the Choctaw Indian, who on a re-cent episode of "Mary Hartman" left her stranded in the ladies room of a bus station. 'Oh dear," she tells the boy, "I don't know what happened to him. He took off with the Apaches, perbaps." The little boy settled for an autograph, and Miss Goodman went on to insist that she hasn't a clue as to what will happen next season. "None of us knows. We go back shooting the end of August, and until then we won't see any scripts. I understand they've hired some new writers, so it'll be exciting to learn whet new calamities they bring in.'

"We were all tired and very frazzled when shooting stopped in June," she continued. "We were working five days a week, from 8:30 in the morning until late evening, and Louise Lasser was on call practically every day. She'a the star of the show you know, she carries the ratings. Of course, all of us would like to have more to do. I've often feit that too much of my time was spent in story exposition, but the other actors feel the same way. Actually, if you want an accurate picture of the cast, we're a family, and tell me what family doesn't have its fights and disagreements? Yet everyone is a professional Louise will often esk me to deliver a line a certain way, to get the proper set-up for her laugh, and Ill do it gladly, because she always extends the same consideration to me."

Has Miss Goodman's comeback on "Mary Hartman" led to other TV offers, possibly her own series? 'I could fib to you and say I've been bombarded with offers," she said, "but I haven't been. Nothing has come in, not even a new TV commercial. Maybe they think I'm too busy. But the secret for survival in this business is to keep working, to think positive, and to have patience. Then you'll accomplish everything. Like Martha, I finaly believe all our tomorrows will be brighter, if you give them a little push, in the right dye-rection."

And it is astonishing to witness the apotheosis of Watter Cronkite from news anchorman to elder statesman. Normally alone on the TV screen, Mr. Cronkite was joined several times by prominent political personalities for "exclusive" interviews. Jimmy Carter's mother, the delightful Miss Lillian, was going to join him at one point as a co-anchorperson, but that plan was wisely vetoed by the Carter staff. The power of a Walter Cronkite was apparent. "You don't have to be a President of the United States to make a difference in this country," Teddy Kennedy told Mr. Cronkite. "You don't even have to be a Congressman," he said, adding with gentle admiration, "Yon make a difference, Mr. Cronkite."

Fortunatory, Mr. Cronkite himself is a level-headed sort, unlikely to tose his perspective in the surrounding sea of bomage. Like most of the top-echelon newsmen in TV, the the CBS enchorman usually soothes and comforts, rarely disturbs. his audience. The infrequent eruptions of annoying behavior are left to lower-echeion reporters. This time around, the award for accming arrogance in the course of aggressive but not especially productive journalism would have to go to NBC's Tom Pottit. For whatever reasons, that reporter's usually wry and impressive style too often turned into a routine bordering on downright snottiness, a quality some observers mistake for anperior insights.

The same quality was prominent throughout much of "The Five-Day Bicycle Race," the name of the cable production thrown together by a diverse group of video people collectively known as the Image Union. Centered in a small studio, the group offered live coverage of its own members, who accepted telephone calls from viewers and presented a series of video tapes, most of which were at that moment being brought in from the convention and related points around town. The pace was casual. The content was generally what used to be called "counter culture," ranging from interviews with prostitutes to a fascinating contraband tape of Richard M. Noxon in the final moments before he delivered his Presidential resignation speech.

If the format was unstructured, the content was inevitably uneven, at its best with a minimum of editorializing. An interview with Jimmy Carter's youngest son, who seems to heve been carefully kept out of the Governor's limelight, was extremely good because he was allowed to express himself easily and freely. His friendly openness came across as quite appealing. On the other hand, a comedy routine involving what was supposed to be Jimmy Carter's hometown preacher was sophomoric and insulting

A few of the video people indulged openly in prejudices equally as obnoxious as any to be found in the "establishment" they hold in contempt. The most prominent of these seemed to be directed against all forms of middle or old age. Another was against any group that might appear wellscrubbed and conventionally well-dressed.

Uneven, annoying, intriguing, often terrific-"The Five-Day Bicycle Race" provided a significant contribution to convention coverage, and at a cost amounting to an infinitesimal fraction of network budgets. The concept deserves and even demands a place in the future coverage of political conventions. But, once again, effort should be made to fill the large coverage gap between network slickness and video experimentation. The convention itself must be allowed a total TV picture. The politicians should stop worrying about prime time exposure and allow the conventions to return to an unlimited amount of debating, to the silly demonstrations and important platforms for dissent-in effect, to the traditional stuff of conventions. Perhaps the virtually unfettered spectacle could be carried on public television.

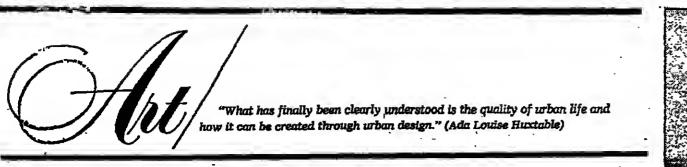

The networks, meanwhile, might devise truly alternative programming that would downplay entertainment values and self-serving promotion in favor of more comprehensive and incisive analysea of basic issues. The task may indeed prom difficult or impossible. But the current barrage of coverage in triplicate is largely proving to be a monumental waste of time and money.

On vacation from "Mary Hartman," Dody Goodman is on the straw-hat circuit.

Splendor Overcomes Snafu In Battery Park City

lot has happened in the ten years since Battery Park City was conceived as a new mixed-use community and kicked off into the Hudson River. Most notably, the sky fell in on New York, and Battery Park City didn't get built. But if that sounds like the end of the story, it's not. As things go in this city, it may only be the beginning.

New York is supposed to thrive on adversity, and adversity is one thing Battery Park City has had plenty of. Conceived by then-Governor Nelson Rockefeller in one of his Baron. Haussmann moods, the project was to be built in Lower Manhattan on landfill in the Hudson, made in part from the World Trado Center excavation. To be initially financed by state bonds, it soon became the embattled child of city and state, presided over by the Battery Park City Anthority, under Charles J. Urstadt.

The history of Battery Park City's planning, design and financing is a star-crossed study in bow things can be done wrong, or go wrong, in a city where the grand snafu is a familiar way of life.

The virtually stillborn plan, bopeless in its banality, was rescued at least twice by consultant architectural midwifery and revised substantially by the city's urban design prodding. While a running design battle continoed, the project's developers backed and filled, the office building market collapsed, Inflation pushed costs sky high, and even the Authority's eminently marketable bonds became untouchable as moral obligation funding went under in the city and state's financial crisis. At the moment, grass is growing on 100 acres of completed, but empty landfill.

And so this may seem an odd time to announce that the plan for Battery Park City has come from a near-total lack of architectural and planning distinction to an exemplary state of design. Now that the project is bucking both the money market and the Emergency Financial Control Board, it has finally developed a concept that would edd immeasurable benefit and amenity to New York, Today Battery Park City is not only worth investing in; it is worth fighting for

To backtrack a bit, Battery Park City originally planned to erect large office towers at the southern tip of the landfill, just off the Battery, and to use the income from this commercial construction to build bousing, shopping and community facilities. (Land preparation, services and open space were to be paid for by Authority honds.) This southern point is still one of the superb sites of the world for the right builder.

But when an overbuilt commercial market made that tack impossible, the Anthority turned to state-aid housing for the first phase of the plan. What ensued was a waltz with developers Samuel Lefrak and Fisher Brothers out of which little camo hut controversy. Although Mr. Lefrak is known g developer of large projects, he is not known as an architectural overachiever. He and his architects pushed for cookie-cutter conformity.

and transitional area, in the character they are given and the pleasures they provide. There are places for repose, recreation, circulation and continuous visual delight.

What has finally been clearly understood and dealt with is the quality of urban life and how it can be created through urban design. (New York has been acquiring a significant number of small doses of this kind of essential environmental amensity in the plazas, through-block passages and bits and pieces of usable open space that have resulted from its innovative zoning. I submit that while there is a long way to go, and vast, impacted areas have not been touched, the city is becoming a more physically agreeable place.)

Plans are complete for the first of Battery Park City's neighborhood units, which will consist of 1,642 spartments for about 5,000 people. The foundations have been constructed for three 34-story towers and three low buildings that are six, seven and eight stories high. Financing is being sought now.

To help find that financing at a time when money is almost impossible to get, the Authority has made an application to the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development for mortgage insurance. With that guarantee in hand, and with the help of the state's programs, it hopes to get the rest of the funding. The future hangs perilously on HUD's action now.

Even at $130 (currently) a room, there should be a stampede for these apartments. The drama and beauty of the Lower Manhattan waterfront is incomparable, and some of the planned features surpass Waterside and Roosevelt Island, both of which have set new standards for New York. (Another New York characteristic is that no one believes that anything better can ever be done, and when it is done, over formidable obstacles, it is promptly taken for granted.)

The current design for the buildings of Battery Park City is credited to Mr. Abramovitz with Jack Brown and Irving Gershon. Strikingly different from earlier versions, they make a real try for variety of form and apartment layout. The completion of these units would, in turn, make possible the construction of subsidized, less expensive housing that is projected to the north.

This first neighborhood unit is grouped around a central space about the size of Waterside or Gramercy Park. It will be reached by a pedestrian bridge from Liberty Street, over the West Side highway. The bridge will join a north-south pedestrian spine that is a shopping street. Automobiles are to be routed to streets and parking below.

This shopping street becomes the highest of fivo pedestrian levels leading down to the river. These levels tia together a variety of public and private spaces. The public spaces will flow around the housing and along the shopping street to a generous park that gradually steps down (there is an pools, to a terraced promenade, plaza and seating at the river's edge. The public waterfront esplanada will run the entire length of the landfill. The houses are arranged to enclose another kind of park-a semi-public green space for the use of the residents of the surrounding buildings. The town houses are to have private yards. When levels change, play space is included on landscaped roofs. There is an organic and functional rationalo for everything, and "keep out" is only a subtle shift of use and location. The public areas will be the largest, with the liveliest facilities.

Eventually, Mr. Lefrak's architects were absorbed into the Authority's design team, beaded by consultant Max Abramovitz of Harrison and Abramovitz. Mr. Abramovitz clustered the buildings in "pods," or neighborhood groups, using platform bases to conceal underground parking and to create pedestrian and vehicular separation.

Lower buildings joined the towers for variety of scale and housing options. And Lawrence Halprin and Associates was called in to work with the architects in the integrated design of the open space.

It is the way this open space is handled that has brought about the miraculous transformation of Battory Park City from a wasteland to a place any lucky New Yorker would want to live. Except for the "view corridors" to the river that New York City's planners insisted on, the spaces were desolate. The change is in how the huildings are related to each other and to the waterfront, in the ottractive landscaping and design techniques used to define public, private

The major part of the cost of all this outdoor amenity will be paid for by Authority bonds; one point in favor of a development agency is that a private builder can rarely afford such special features. There will be a range of experiences from community activity to serene privacy, and for all, dramatic riverfront walks and spectacular water views. Landscape architect Lawrence Halprin calls the plan a 'vertical greenbelt town." As designed now, New York cannot offord to lose it. Battery Park City has finally come out like a rose.

Which countries had and which countries did not have pavilions depended partly on historical accident. partly on national prestige in the early years of this century. Like the Isola di Cimetero where the Venetians bury their dead (now you are only allowed to lio there 12 years before being transferred to a bono yard at the other end of the lagoon), the gardens have precious little room for new pavilions. To attempt to turn this solitude int theater-which is what, in the end, contempora tries to do-is to mistake the very nature of museum exists to preserve.

Whether we applaud this development or deplore it, the irony of the situation should not be lost on us. An institution whose entire raison d'etre is to afford an experience of the real work of art is now emerging as the greatest single source of artistic counterfeits-as the source, in a sense, of a kind of artistic pollution.

Unfortunately, even if the museum visitor decides to defer his surrender to the siren song of the museum shop until his appetite for the real work of art has been sated, he may still find himself in the grip of this busy aids-to-art industry once be enters the galleries where the objects are. Between himself and the objects he has come to see, an army of museum functionaries now interposes its taste, its vision, its ideas and ideologies. In today's art museum, the galleries-whether they contain temporary exhibitions or permanent installations are more and more a zone of factitious visual giamour. The walls are painted special colors and printed legends abound. And the lighting-oh, the lightingl What imagination, what energy, what money go into all this lighting, which treats every object as if it were, to begin with, something hidden that can be fully revealed to us only by means of a complex and expensive technology. Who could guess, as we rub our eyes and try to shade them from the glare, that the bulk of the objects we see in museums were created-and for a long time, enjoyed-under conditions of light far simpler than any that we now encounter?

The effect of all this artifice is to narrow the distance that separates our experience of the real work of art from that of its counterfeit. When the walls of the museum look more and more like a magazine layout, when the lighting of the object is designed to make it look as slick and glossy as a reproduction and the object itself is obliged to compete with reading matters for our attention, somothing precious is being lost to us. The pollution we have just escaped in the museum shop is almost worse, at times, in the museum Our Museums Are Flooded With Counterfeit Art

The wood used for the divider strips is straight lengths of 2x4 lumber (they must be straight). Redwood is the most attractive and rot resistant, but other rot-resistant woods can also be used. For longest lasting results, wood that has been pressure treated against rot would be preferable.

Although dimensions can be varied, the grids or squares on the terrace pictured were made 36 inches square. The 2x4'a were put together on edge (so that the narrow edge will be exposed when the job is done), and the long pieces are notched where the cross pieces meet them for maximum strength. In any event, joints are assembled with rustproof screws driven in through the ends, or from an angle (like toenailing) where it is not possible to drive screws in from the end. As an alternate to using screws, rustproof nails could also be used, butthese should be of the ringed or "threaded" type which Continued on Page 32

Everybody Is Climbing Their Family Tree

Sunday, July 25, 1976

Genealogy-the study of one's ancestral family treehas become an increasingly popular leisure time activity in recent years. Some people have speculated that the celebration of the Bicentennial has prompted more Americans to wonder about their pasts, and about who their great, great grandparents were, or what their ancestors were doing 200 years ago. "Actually," says Warren Skidmore, curator of the Public Library's ALTOR genealogical collection, "we are a rootless people, and in a rootless society people don't search for status or wealth as much as they do for a subtle substitutenection with a time when the home and family were more definite."

Genealogy has always been moderately popular in America, but twice before-in 1750 and again in 1876-history shows that Americans staged an increased interest in genealogy. No one knows for sure why there was such a growth of interest in 1750, but in 1876 the Centennial obviously played its role. Whatever the explanations, records for the years surrounding 1750 and 1876 are more available and detailed than for any other time periods in American history. Genealogists of today, however, say that their efforts are more organized, more intense and more cooperative than ever before. The current surge of interest began about 10 years ago and has resulted in the formation of numerous small groups of genealogists in local chapters throughout the country. Some enthusiasts say that better communications, improved availability of records and the higher level of literacy of those doing today's research are among the principal reasons for today's increase in interest.

At any rate, the interest is there. And one factor that is undoubtedly contributing to the popularity of this hobby is that it is a simple one to get into. For those interested in tracing their own family tree, the first step is to purchase a pack of pedigree and family group sheets. A hundred sbeets will cost about $3 at office supply stores and some public libraries. They can also be ordered from the Everton Publishing Co., Inc., P.O. Box 368, Logan, Utah 84321. of thought. In most cases there is so much to picture that the ahundance of material can be unsettling and selectivity is difficult because there is no pre-awarecess. The answer to coming out of this plethora of material with good pictures is in focus-not in focusing the camera, hut in focusing the mind. This means selection in advance-selection of the aspects of the subject that ought to be exposed.

For example, suppose one wants to take some marine pictures, Iostead of heading straight for the shore to shoot hlissfully away the photographer thinks over what he knows about the shore, focusing his mind on that subject alone. Jotting down every idea that comes to mind is worthwhile, but at this point one should not be critical. The notes can be reviewed later.

In this case the photographer gets set with a good spot to give the composition he has in mind. Then he patiently allows the simple: action to complete his photograph. Curiously enough it stretches his long trunk forward to gently scoop some nuts out of one of the children's hands the abutter is pressed, capturing not only the action but the delighted look on the child's face.

Over and over this type of shooting works, whether it is people feeding elephants, a need for people to improve a street scene, or a requirement for a boat moving into the picture. All that is required is planning and patience. When the anticipated action does take place the photo has what is needed to holo the viewer's interest. One important advantage of working in this manner is that one is prepared for the unexpected. The mind is ready and the hand and eye will respond at precisely the best time.

There is oo longer any need to burn up film and conversely there is no tendency to make one shot do for any subject. Finding the happy medium becomes easier.

The reason this method works and makes photography more fun, is that it helps avoid the worst trap in photography, that of just going out to shoot pictures. There is more fun in photography when the camera user knows what will occupy his time, and above all the pictures brought back will be better. The rules are few and Assign or select a subject

From the Past: Culture and Causes

SAMUEL A. TOWER

The cuiture and causes of an earlier time have inspired new issues of unusual interest from Great Britain, Canada and Nationalist China along with other stamps that attest to individuals of note and national attainments.

The British have looked at their past from two different perspectives, recalling the centuries-old traditions that have now become part of the cultural life of the nation and the struggles to change the way so many Britons lived. and worked 150 years ago amid the incredibly appalling conditions of the Industrial Revolution.

The songs, music, dance and poetry of the bards, are what the British have recalled on a set of four vertical stamps, all in six colors, coming out on Aug. 4. Two are devoted to the Royal National Eisteddfod, which will be celebrating its 800th anniversary when this year's event takes place next month in Cardigan, Wales. The other two are devoted to Morris Dances and Highland Gather-

The Weish, with their love of singing, like to get together in family or local groups for songs and recitals in a Noson Lawen, An Eisteddiod is a Noson Lawen on a larger scale. Many towns and valleys have their own Eisteddfodau, but the national one is world famous. It is held in North Wales and South Wales on alternate years. The most exciting moment is the Crowning of the Bard, winner of an opic poem competition, in a ceremony by the Gorsedd or circle of Druids led by the Archdruid.

The 8½-pence and 13p stamps mark the National Eisteddfod anniversary. The 8½p depicts the Gorsedd award ceremony, with a white-robed Archdruid in the foreground and dark-robed Druids behind. The 13p displays one of the traditional instruments of Wales-the telyn or harp. The 10p shows a man do-

From Canada have come this month two commemoratives: one for Robert Service, whose writings vividly portrayed the Canadian North and who is best known to Americans for his "Shooting of Dan McGrew"; and one for Germaine Guevremont, who won fame in the 1940's and 1950's for her novels about French Canada. The stamps depict scenes from their works.

Service, an Englishman who grew up in Scotland and described himself as a born tramp, came to Canada in 1894 and made his way to Whiteborse and Dawson in the Yukon. To divert himself he wrote poems collected into "Songs of a Sourdough" and "Ballads of a Cheechako." At first glance HID lamps may appear confusing, since a number of different types primarily are available from manufacturers such as GE, Duro-Test and Sylvania. These include mercury vapor, metal balide, and sodium vapor lamps.

Mercury vapor lamps are the oldest HID lamps. Earlier types were clear and most of the light was emitted in the green and blue part of the spectrum.

Metal halide lamps emit light in both red and blue portions of the spectrum and are well suited to promoting plant growth. Phosphor coated forms for increased effectiveness are also available. Sodium vapor lamps come in a high pressure and low pressure form, Most of their light is emitted in the red region of the spectrum.

The new approach appears to be a step in the right directioo for one of the bottlenecks of whitefly control is the insect's ability to multiply rapidly. Adults will mate and lay eggs within two days after their pupae stage. And each female will lay over 100 eggs. All stages of whitefiles can be on the host plant at the same time making control extremely difficult. One spray aimed at the egg stage will be ineffective for the adult stage and vice versa.

The new approach is slow acting and provides a gradual reduction of the whitefly population rather than a massive kill. And the great plus for the future, bome gardeners should have a better opportunity to buy spring bedding annuals that will be relatively free of whitefly. This has been one of the major sources of infestatioo as many growers have been unable to keep their wholesale stock clean. And the pests were distributed on the bedding annuals, free of charge.

Meanwhile, on the home front, some cootrol of whitefly is possible with malathioo applied four times at 10-day intervals. Or for house plants and outdoor ornamentals, not vegetables, there is the synthetic pyrethroid resmethrin (SBP-1382) a pressurized spray sold as White Fly Spray for control of adult whitefly.

Good News for Elms

The Environmental Protection Agency has approved a fungicide that can be injected into elm trees to save them from the ravages of Dutch elm disease. The material, known as Lignasan, is a more highly water-soluble form of the fungicide, benomyl, manufactured by the DuPont Company. The fungicide acts as a systemic in the tree and can aid in the cure of Dutch elm disease as well as halt the spread of infection in trees that are oot yet severely damaged.

Concrete Terrace Can Be Built in Square

have much greater holding power than ordinary nails. The first step in building a terrace of this type is to make a scale drawing of the layout on graph paper. Generally speaking the longest pieces of lumber obtainable should be used for the perimeter or border strips to minimize the number of joints required. If possible, the pieces that go across the narrower dimension (the

be in one piece. Short pieces are then used between these (parallel to the length of the terrace) to form the squares. After figuring all this out on paper, one can make a list of the actual lengths needed to form the 2x4 grid. If pieces will be notched or dadoed where they join, allowance for this extra length must be made when figuring the length of the short pieces. Since cutting the pieces to length involves much dupli-

width) of the terrace should to do this job is with a power saw-especially if each joint will be notched or dadoed as pictured. Some may find it simpler to give the list of pieces needed to the lumber yard, then let them cut all pieces to size (they will notch them also if a milling fee is paid).

After the lumber for the framework is ready, all sod is removed from the area to be paved. If the soil is firm and well drained, the concrete can be poured right on top of this, but if the soil. contains a lot of clay or does not drain rapidly after a rain, then it is best to dig down an extra four inches and spread a layer of compacted gravel over the ground first to serve as a bese.

Although a footing around the perimeter is not necessarily required for a terrace of this kind, it is a good idea to include one in areas where heavy freezing may be encountered - a foundation footing will lessen the chances of heaving or cracking. A footing is also advisa-ble if a roof of some kind will be put up over the terrace at a later date (it is required by local codes in many areas when a permanent roof is installed).

To construct a foundation footing a trench must be dug around the perimeter about 8 inches wide, and deep enough to go down below the frostline (30 to 36 inches in most perts of the Northeast). This trench is then filled with poured concrete, or with cement blocks joined together with mostar.

After the site has been prepared and leveled off, the next step is assembling the wood grid on the ground. Start by first laying out all perimeter pieces to outline the terrace, then assemble the corner joints. Lengthwise joints (these should be halflapped or joined end-to-end with brass plates screwed to the sides) are assembled next to complete the perimeter framework.

The next step is installing all the long pieces that go across the terrace. If joints are being made with notches as pictured (the notches will have been cut ahead of time by the lumber yard or in the or in the workshop if you have a table saw or radial arm saw), then the location of each joint is automatically indicated, but if simple butt joints are being made then each joint should be marked

Q: I am about to paint the front doors and garage door of my house, but notice that the doors have very fine, hairling vertical cracks in the paint. The garage door also has spiderlike fine cracks-something like an eggshell. Can you suggest the simplest method for preparing these surfaces for painting?-W.P., Montreal, Que.

A: The best solution in both cases would be to remove all the paint down to the bars wood with a paint and varnish remover, then apply a cost of primer followed by one or two coats of house paint in the color of your choice. The vertical cracks sound as though they are following the grain of the wood, which might indicate that the wood itself is cracking. If so, filling may be required after the primer cost. If you don't want to remove all the paint you can try sending till reasonably smooth and dull, then filling the cracks with an exterior vinyl spackling compound, or a marine compound sold for use on wood boats (for filling fine cracks). This can then be painted over and should hold up if the wood underneath is sound, and if the old paint is adhering tightly.

Q: Is there any product I can apply to a slate floor in my hallway to give it a slight shine, yet will not need constant waxing?-L.Q., Floral Park, N.Y.

A: Most paint stores and many slate and stone dealers sell clear penetrating sealers that are suitable for use on slate. These will give a dull, "oiled" look to the floor, but not a high shine. They will last longer if waxed occasionally, but waxing is not essential-leaving it off just means you will have to reapply the sealer more often.

Q: Do you have any suggestions as to how I can mount stereo speakers on a Sheetrock wall? The speakers are approximately 12 by 13 by 24 inches, and they weigh about 40 pounds each.-L.H., Floral Park, N.Y.

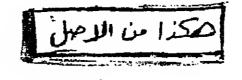

A: If possible the most solid mounting would result if you can position the speakers so they can be mounted to the 2x4 studs inside the wall. If this is possible, drive in long screws or screw hooks, then hang the speakers on these. If you cannot locate the speakers directly over studs, then the next best solution is to use expansion type anchors. Many variations are sold in all hardware stores and lumber yards. These are inserted through a hole drilled or punched in the Sheetrock, then a screw in the center is tightened. This causes the metal part to expand behind the wall and grip securely. These anchoring devices come in various sizes, and there are some that will easily support 40 pounds. However, I would recommend using two anchors for each speaker-just as a safety measure.

Q: I have to fasten quite a few 2x3's to the concrete walls of my basement to frame out rooms and cabinets I am building there. What is the simplest way to nail these to the concrete?-H. G., Troy, N. Y.

Coke drinkers prefer Pepsi? Atlanta could hardly sit still for that. "Coca-Cola is pre-ferred 2 to 1 over Pepsi in the New York area." came the rejoinder "Cora-Cola is the New York area." came the rejoinder. "Coca-Cola is preferred 2 to 1 over Pepsi in the New York, New Jer-sey, Conn. area." And so went similar statements, region by region. The battle was joined.

Mr. Kendall, whose outer office contains inscribed pictures of President Ford (auto-graphed pictures of Mr. Nixon and his family are in the inner office) talked the other day about the origins of the current cola war. fronically, he said, the con-cept of a confrontation with Coke grew out of market research conducted for Pepsi's previous, rather lackluster campaign: "The taste that beats the others cold."

The research had indicated that more than half the Coke drinkers who participated in a blind test of Pepsi and Coke preferred the taste of Pepsi, he said.

So Pepsi decided to launch a "challenge" campaign in a marketing area where it had traditionally heen weak: Dal-las and Fort Worth.

It blitzed the region with advertising and promotion and in the last year or so, its share of the soft drink market in Dallas more than doubled-from less than 7 percent to about 14 percent, according to industry sources. (During the same period Coke reportedly remained relatively stable with about a quarter of the market.) The challenge then went out in San Antonio and

he Sign

Corpus Christi, then Michi-gan, greater New York and Los Angeles.

Coke, for its part, at first attacked the methodology of Pepsi's testing, and then began stressing sales. Pepsi has countered the latest Coke strategy by saying it has nothing to do with "taste." Entering into Pepsi's deci-sion to employ comparative advertising was its unhappy experience as the victim of a similar strategy in the early 1970's. After the government ordered cyclamates removed from diet drinks, Pepsi added some sugar to offset the bilter aftertaste of saccharine and thereby raised the calorie count of Diet-Pepsi to about 30. Coke's diet drink, Tab, promptly attacked with boasts about its own single-calorie count. Diet-Pepsi had to retreat.

How does Mr. Kendall feel about squaring off with J. Paul Austin, his counterpart at Coca-Cola? "I love to battle him in the market place," said Mr. Kendall. Pepsico Is the nation's 83d

Customers are buying tractors, combines, brush hogs, plows, planters, balers and forage equipment. Mr. Deems says he sells $2.5 million worth a year, he calls it "a good living" and in farm equipment circles it's said that a husiness of this size works down to a before-tax profit of a quartermillion dollars a year.

Mr. Deems and his farm equipment business symbolize the boom that has swept through American agriculture the past four years and is still cootinuing. The valoe of agricultural, forest and fishery products in this nation

John Edmiston, for example, dropped in recently to talk about a round haler, a $6,230 machine that makes 1,500-pound round bay bales. He folded his hands inside the bib of his overalls and spit his chewing tobacco between sentences. On his feet were loafers and his socks had holes in their heels.

What Am I to Believe About The Social Security System?

During the past several years the Social Security System (Old-Age, Survivora, and Disability Insurance System—OASDI in government sborthand) has been the object of much concarn and discussion. So much ao, that most individuals in the nation are apt to be bewildered.

- Most news coverage has generally dealt with only small pieces of the system and has tanded to accentuate problems in an out-of-context explenetion of what is, at best, a complex program.

What follows here is an overview of OASDI-some of its problems, prospects and possible solutions — in a way most citizens can understand. This information covera the basic structure of OASDI and its financing. It is excerpted and digested from a more complete paper covering such additional topics as are indicated at the bottom of this advertisement.*

A copy of the complete paper may be obtained at no cost by writing to The Bankers Life, Consumer Services SS4, 711 High Street, Des Moines, Iowa 50307. This overview is being offered as a public service. Be assured that no sales effort of any kind will be directed toward those who wish to respond to the above offer for a copy of the complete paper.

Is the Social Security system

in serious financial difficulty? If tha question implias that the system is in any sense benkrupt, or that it has difficulties graater then it can handle, the answer must be "no". Perhaps a qualified "yes" is more appropriate, however, since financing problams heve arisen with which those interested in the futura wall-baing of the Social Security systam must be concerned.

The most racent reports of the Trustees of the OASDI system project that benefits end expenses over the next few years will exceed income from social security taxes and investment earnings. This means that the trust funds. amounting to $43 billion at the end of 1975, may decrease to zero by as early as 1980. This short-range picture has been greatly affected by the high retes of inflation experienced in the recent past, causing an 8% increase in all benefits in mid-1975. It has also been affected by high levels of unemploymant. If nothing is done immediately about the sbort-range financing of social security, the trust funds will be called upon to carry out their contingency reserve function-i.e., that of keeping the benefits flowing while changes in the financing are being considered. More serious is the long-range pictura. About twenty years from now tha projectad level of taxes falls far sbort of the banafits then to be paid; and after the turn of the century tha financing may be even less adequate. We can traca this longer renge imbalance, which has only become apparent quite recantly, to spacific economic. social and demographic forces which combine to have rather sarious consequences for tha longrange health of tha systam.

wage related), rising wages by themselves have the effect of improving the financial state.

The long-renge finencial bealth of the OASDI system therefore depends on how wage and prica increeses compare with each other. Only if there is e rather substantial gain in real wages [i.a., wages grow about twice as fast as prices] can the system be self-supporting at the tax rates now provided. Although the United States has bad gains in wagas of this general magnitude over much of the last quarter century, it seems doubtful that thesa can continue.

What are the implications of low fertility retes?

The United States experienced a "baby boom" after World War II, with very high fertility rates continuing well into the 1960's. For the last ten years, bowever, these rates bave fallen off sbarply. The total fertility rate, the number of children the average woman would bear over ber lifetime if fertility rates at each age were to stay at their presect level, has now declined to a point below 2. We have reached the conditions necessary for zero-populationgrowth, so if these low fertility rates continue the population will level off eveatually. Even so, tha population will continue to grow for quite soma time because we now have more women in the childbearing ages, a legacy of the post-war baby boom. The effect of these changing fertility patterns on social security financing is favorable as to the short run. There will be substantial numbers of new entrants to the labor force for another faw years, until the late end of the baby boom gets out of school. Tha system should thereby gain in sociel security taxes. Shortly after tha turn of tha century, howaver, wa can expect a strain on social security financing. Tha ratio today is 3 beneficiaries to 10 taxpayers, but demographic changes could push tha ratio up to 4 or even 5 to 10. This would have an important and unfavorabla effect on the financing of the system.

but with two exceptions. Thare is no tax above the maximum taxable earnings base, and there is no tax. on investment income. For these reasons tha social security tax. looked upon by itsalf, can ba proparly considered regressive. When we consider the benefit side of tha system, however, we find exactly the opposite. Benefits for the low income people, in proportion to the taxes they have paid. are much higher than for tha highly paid. For the low paid, the social security primary benefit provides a wage replacement in the neighborhood of 60%, while the high paid receives only about 30% of the taxable earnings base, and nothing in excess thereof. This progressivity in the benefit structure outweighs tha regressivity in the tax structure, so that the system taken os o whole is clearly progressive. The system was clearly intended to be progressive in neture, and it ectually works out to be.

Is anything being done about the actuarial imbalance? Yes. Mucb good work has already been done, and more is going forward et the moment.

First. the actuaries employed by the Social Security Administration brought the problem to the attention of the executive end legislative branches of governmant and to the general public—first in the 1974 Report of the Trustees of the OASDI system, and again in the 1975 Report. The 1976 Report will undorbitedly provide updated information.

Second' the Advisory Council on Social Security, a group of public minded citizens appointed in 1974 in accordance with the Social Security law, made its report in early 1975. The financing of the OASDI system was the subject of the Council's major attention, and the expected increase in the ratio of beneficiaries to workers. This possibility was mentioned by tha Advisory Council, but it has not yatreceived the attention it deserves. A Financing of a part of social security from general revenues, in place of the current full reliance on the payroll tax.

None of these alternativas is particularly attractive, but some combination of the four-named above is likely to be necessary somewhere down the read. There is one change of a less controvarsial nature that can and should be made fairly seon. This is a technical change recommended by the Advisory Council designed to improve the stability of the systam under conditions of inflation. This proposal has been called by some tha "uncoupling" proposal By itself uncoupling will reduce, but will not eliminate, tha long-ranga

How do you summarize the outlook for OASDI financing? The Social Security systam has racantly been subjected to economic and social forces that. raise questions about the soundness of its financing. Although relatively minor adjustmants are needed within a yaer or two to solve its short-term problems, the reel concern is with the long-range outlook, beavily impacted by the ... current low fertility rates in contrest to the baby-boom following World Wer II, end by the possibility of high inflation rates and smaller future gains in real earnings.

More finencing than provided. by current lew will be needed. especially after the turn of the century, unless current trends are. reversed or retirement ages ere raised. This additional financing can come from higher payroll tax rates, or an infusion of general revenue financing. In any evant there is one action that cen and should be taken to stabilize the system under conditions of inflation, improve itsequity between various groups. and belp with the actuarial deficit. The Advisory Council's recommendation as to a benefit formula change points tha way to this important first step.

What are the economic forces affecting Social Security financing?

By far the most sarious is inflation, and its immediate consequences. The financing of the systam is very sansitive to tha relative rates of increase in consumer prices and in wages.

Tha benefits for those already on the beneficiary rolas increese automatically with the Consumers Price Index, es do tha potential benefits for those joining the roles in the future. The outgo from the system, therefore, increases directly with inflation.

Inflation in pricas is accompanied by inflation of wages. The income to the system increases as average wages rise, because social sacurity taxes are a percent of wages. Although increasing weges also have the effect of increesing benefits (because the system is What about the argument that the OASDI system is regressive?

The concept thet the OASDI system is ragressive comes from looking only at the tax side, ignoring the benefit structure.

The social security tax, viewad entirely es a tax aod ignoring its special purpose, is regressive—low incoma workers pay a largar proportion of thair incomes as social security tax than do the higher paid. The social security tax is actually proportional to income, the matter to which many of its recommendations were directed. Finally, two successive panels of actuaries end economists bave been appointed by Congress to review the specific recommendations of the Council.

All in all, both the legislative and executive branches of government ere taking the problems seriously—and there is hope that legislative action improving the situation can be enected before the 94th Congress goes out of existanca at the end of 1976.

What can or should be done to solve the Social Security financing problems?

Changas that may be neaded to bring the future benafits and future taxes into balance are of a somawhet controvarsial nature. They will not be quickly decided. 1. An increase in the social security tax rate paid by employars, employees, and the self-employed. The incraasa can be modast for the near future. but may be quita eubstantial 25 years from now. Tha Administration has proposed an increase in the OASDI employeremployaa tax rate from 4.95% to 5:25%, first affectiva in 1977. 2. An increase in the maximum earnings on which taxes are paid and on which benefits are based. This approach has always appealed to the legislators, and the taxable aarnings base has been increased substantially in recent years. Undar present law the bese goas up automatically as average aarnings rise. For 1976, it is $15,300. For 1977, it is likely to be $16,500 [or thereabouts). A further incraase in this base would halp tha financing very little. 3. A graduel moving of the retirement age upward, to counter

The image of the auditor with a contrary opinion ends at the client's doorstep. On the rare occasions when the firm simply cannot accept certain accounting practices, it loses clients railroads and savings and loans in the Andersen case—a situation that all accountants fece at one time or another.

Nor is an Arthur Andersen euditor in the field expected to show independence. Field auditors are closely super-vised by a chain of command that reaches from the Cleve-land, Milan, Istanbul or any other of the 105 Andersen offices to 35 countries all the way to the 35th floor of the swick Building in downtown Chicago. "On the F.A.S.B. issue, I think they've hurt our whole effort to keep the standards setting function in the pri-vate sector rather than let-ting it fall under the control of a government agency, with all the political ramifications that involves."

Mr. Kapnick says "Our complaint isn't with the concept of the F.A.S.B. but the Marshall Armstrong, chair-man of the F.A.S.B., said last week "Everyone is well aware of Mr. Kapnick's criti-cism of my personal leader-ship and of the board itself. And L won't comment on And I won't comment on that. But I will say that we believe strongly that we are putting in place a private sector standards setting body that will be useful to the profession for many years to come. And we need the sup-port of the S.E.C. to do so."

The board itself said it probably couldn't survive if the Andersen position pre-vailed. And if the F.A.S.B. is nervous about the Chicago accounting giant, it might be excused. Its predecessor, the Accounting Principles Board, manned by a group of un-paid volunteers, was brought down three years ago in a storm of criticism, notably from Mr. Kapnick's firm.

No one in the know doubts that Andersen would go to court to fight the S.E.C. if it finds it can't win by persuasion, and that prospect in itself is close to astounding in the somber world of public accounting. It would be completely astounding except for the fact that the S.E.C. has once before and only once-been sued by an accounting firm-Arthur Andersen, in 1973. The S.E.C. later changed its mind on the rule involved.

Warren Marcus of Salomon Brothers, who is to present the B.F.A.A. position et the than any oew technical triumphs we encounter along the way." Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, sald in a letter to the F.A.S.B. that central bank was "deeply concerned" that the adoption of current value accounting "could undermine the ability of [financial] in-stitutions to function effec-

Analysts and former Pepsi Analysts and former Pepsi executives give Mr. Kendall generally high marks for the way he has run Pepsico since taking it over in 1963, even though he clearly followed a good act good act.

One of his predecessors, Alfred N. Steele, was a legend in the soft drink business, and is credited with making Pepsi a major factor in the market.

When Mr. Steels died in 1959, his widow, Joan Craw-ford, became identified as Pepsi's leading spokesman, even though she had only a small minority of shares of the company's stock.

A well-publicized feud between Miss Crawford and Mr. Kendall-apparently over who deserved the major lime-light-simmered for years before sha was phased out of the operation. At the height of the hitterness, she began referring to Mr. Kendall as "fang," according to one of her associates.

Today, Mr. Kendall shrugs off such talk, and points to Pepsi's accomplishments in the market place, including its highly-publicized ventures in the Scriat Union when it in the Soviet Union, where it expects to announce soon the construction of two new bottling plants, one of them in Moscow.

Much of Mr. Kendall's time these days is spent flying off to remote corners of the world on Pepsi's behalf. Early in May, for example, he met with Soviet trade ministers to settle details on the Mos-cow plant. Soon after, he toured Pepsi facilities in Iran. Why Holt pinpoints selected... Utility Stocks Yielding Over 9%

...Not only for high current income but long-term capital growth potential too

It is not at all surprising that many knowing investors are now looking into utility stocks with intensifying interest.

For this particular group of stocks, the bear market started way back in 1965, when the Dow Jones utility index began a 9-year decline that erased nearly 65% of its value. During the same period, howaver, the net income and dividends of soma of these stocks have followed an upward course.

The result of these cross-trends is that a number of stocks in this power group now yield over 9%. But high yields alone are not enough, says T.J. Holt. (For in-stance, a stock with shaky earnings and dividends should sell on a high-yield ba-sis.) What investors should look for now, Holt advises, are rich yields of up to 10% that are also clearly supported by (a) reasonable assurance that the current dividend rates are safe, (b) a long-term record of past earnings and dividend growth, and (c) solidly based prospects for future dividend hikes.

Power Play

Without doubt, the industry has been confronted by many problams, including rising fuel cost, regulatory and environmental red tape, and lofty interest rates. However, we believe the worst is over. In many cases, the stocks amply discount the remaining problems. Moreover, the developments have begun to help-not hurt-the industry.

Specific Recommendations

Holt's latest report on the Electric Utility Industry carefully documents why we think the worst is over for the industry and why unusual opportunities have emerged in this group. It also presents a list of eight attractive utility stocks, four of which are apecifically recommended for current purchase. DETROIT - Two months ago the American Natural Gas Company became the American Natural Resources Company. It's not that the Detroit-based company is up to its pipeline in natural resources; it's just that executives know they'd better start looking for additional business because there isn't that much gas.

"We'd be crazy not to look for other business," says Wilber H. (Deke) Mack, the blunt-talking chairman of the executive committee, it's not that they are abandoniog gas: "We're going to stay in the gas business until hell won't have it." he says. But the goal is to produce 25 percent to 35 percent of the company's profits from nongas operations in a decade.

While we foresee very large increases in our olant investment — and therefore our earnings-over the next 10 years, we don't foresee any large increases in gas supply," says Arthur Seder Jr., the utility's chairman and president. "This means our president. "This means our increases would have to come from rate increases." he said. "We think that's not a satisfactory situation."

Ambitious young men and women would not want "to go to work for a company that doesn't have prospects for growth in volume," said Mr. Seder, who succeeded the 65-year-old Mr. Mack as corporate chairman this month.

Arthur R. Seder Jr., chairman of American Natural Resources Company, plans to keep gas sales at current levels.

Michigan Consolidated also has had excess gas to sell. Last year, the company sold 11 billion cubic feet—enough to heat 55,000 homes for a vear-to two interstate pipe-lines serving Ohio and another pipeline serving the South-east, and its been selling gas to other Michigan utilites since 1973.

American Natural started in 1938 and entered the pipe-line business in the late 1940's because it feared its major gas supplier, Pahhan-dle Eastern Pipeline Compadeliveries to Michigan Coo-solidated while trying to take over some of its industrial

Today, the compaoy owns not only the gas distribution business and Michigan Wioconsin Pipe Line, but half of the Great Lakas Transmis-sion Company, which brings gas from western Canada to eastern Canada and the upper Midwest, and also has its own gas exploration com-pany, and gets 93 percent of gas from resources it its controls.

Consumers Power of Michigan, in contrast, decid-ed, to rely on Panhandle which has now cut back deliv-eries about 40 percent. As a result Consumers were forced to build an expensive synthetic gas plant and its are now 30 p.rcent Michigan Consultated. Today the company's major money maker is the Michigan Wisconsin 'Pipe Line Company which carries gas from producers in Kansas and the Southwest to 54 gas distributors in nine states, primarily Michigan and Wisconsin. This pipeline accounts for two-third of American Natural's profits, $102 million last vear.

American Natural's other major holding, Michigan Con-solidated Gas, is the largest gas distribution company in Michigan, covering about 1 million customers in Detroit and some of its suburbs, and smaller cities such as Grand Rapids and Ann Arbor.

The company is still adding customers, making its al-lowed profit-or a little more each year-and has curtailed . deliveries less than any other .major interstate pipeline, ac-cording to the Government. And the utility also is engaged in expensive ventures -off-shore Texas exploration, gas from the Canadian Arctic, coal gasification plants—to replace supplies of conventional gas that are running out.

Other forms of energy will fill the gap caused by static or decreasing gas supplies. "and we feel we're qualified to do it," said Mr. 5eder.

As an example, American Natural plans to market the petroleum by-products from its proposed coal gasification plant in North Dakota. The plant in North Dakota. The company controls 3.6 billion tons of North Dakota lignite coal — far more than its planned gasification plants can use—and hopes to hogin gasifying it in the early 1980's.

The utility also is looking for acquisitions in the engi-neering, pipeline construc-tion, and oil and coal trans-portation business (pipelines and barges), and might get tion business.

-However, Mr. Seder said, American Natural doesn't plan to diversify as Tenneco Inc., formerly the Tennessee-Gas Company, but now into agriculture and other nonenergy fields.

"Our criteria for diversification are such that we will remain in energy and energy-related fields." Mr. Seder insists.

In recent years, Mr. Seder and Mr. Mack have combined lysts Society of Detroit, al-though it did occasionally make presentations in New York. But even with the presentations, American Natto form an effective management team with contrasting styles. The portly, effusive Mr. Mack specialized in ne-gotiating for gas supplies ural didn't go out of its way to seek attention in New

But the utility's reluctance to toot its own horn may be diminishing somewhat. In addition to the Detroit presentation in May, the company embarked on a modest financial advertising campaign when it changed its name. That was its first financial advertising campaign ever.

has been a disturbing concentration in the securities distribution network. The number of securities firms registered with the National Association of Securities Dealers shrank from 4,800 in 1962 to 2,900 in 1975, impairing the efficiency of the selling effort. Obviously, savings in this country are flow-ing into fewer and fewer bands and fewer end fewer people are making investment decisions. The causes of this remarkable shift are manifold. One. of course, is the inflation of receot years, which bas seriously eroded corporate profits and imposed severe strain on our financial institutions. Along with It came dramatically declining stock prices, causiog serious losses to most individual shareholders. It is small wonder that so many individuals abeodoned both direct stock ownership and mutual funds.

The traume of these years, combined with the increased concentration in our fioancial iostitutions, has particularly affected our smaller and more marginal companies.

The evidence can be seeo in the stock mar-ket. The Value Lloe Index of 1,500 Big Board, American Stock Exchange and over-the-coun-ter stocks which, unlike the Big Board's Dow Jones averages or Standard & Poor's "500." weighs each company equally, was at 88 et yearend 1962—and at the same figure at yearend 1975. Clearly the treod toward concentration in the financial markets results in part from circumstances that cannot readily be controlled, such as inflatioo and the recent recession.

To the Financial Editor. The article on mopeds Two Wheels and a Putt-Putt" (July 11) quotes Anthony J. Parenti, president of the New Jersey Police Traf-fic Officers Association, aa stating that if the moped is not regulated . . . 'it'll become a grizzly statistic." Clearly, Mr. Pareoti was felt to be bearish on these

Carter's Budget

To the Financial Editor.

In "The Contradictions in Carter'a Budget Policy" (July 11) the question is raised as to bow Jimmy Carter would pay for all his public benefit programs and still balance the budget.

It would not take long to find out that our budget policy of today is providing more than a bundred bil-lion dollars for defense purposes, in which an out-rageous amount of waste (not to mention payoffs) is in-volved, benefitting very few. If it were diverted to public were diverged to public programs, it would benefit millions, if our government would spend wisely, our na-tion could accomplish much. TERRENCE KENNEDY New York July 15, 1976

Undertaking oew programs included in the Democratic latform oeed oot contradict a balanced budget, if a zero base budget approach is used The traditional approach to hudgeting normally implies adding new programs on top of old ones, = thus bigger spending.

The essence of zero-based budgeting is to make priority trade-offs among programs.

The process begins by questioning why each program exists at all (the zero base). It then reformulates the budget of each program with expenditure levels or increments from all programs ranked one against another in priority order. By choosing to give new programs a higher priority rank than one or more expenditure increments from on-going programs, Mr. Car-ter could fund elements of his platform without increasing the total budget and becoming a "big spender." JAMES R. CLEAVE Washington, D.C. July 15, 1976

Housing

To the Financial Editor: Builders bemoan "new environmental protection regu-lations" as stifling new con-struction and raising the cost of new homes beyond the reach of most potential huy-ers ("How Government Is Pushing Up the Cost of Hous-ing" July 18). But our cities and older acourbs are filled with active descine teach with solid old housing stock. In many areas, this housing is being allowed to decay, in part because of the prefer-ence by lending institutions for new construction. As demonstrated by the brown-stone revivals in downtown Brooklyn and elsewbere, this old bousing can be reclaimed, to fulfill the American dream for yet another generation of young American families. And while the profits for the new housing builders may decline, businessmen who choose to service the old housing market will prosper. ED WEINTROA July 19, 1976

Arms Danger

To the Financial Editor: The specter of Vietnam continues to haunt this na-tion's collective conscience. Moral mertia has allowed the Pentagon and the arms industry to gain an even greater

teries. dominance as witnessed by oew record military budget. Obviously, the 1,200 former Pentagon officials who now work for the arms industry (mostly as lobbyists) have paid off many times over. As reported in "All Systems Are Go for the Arms Makers" (Mey 16) "the outlook for the United States military production industries is more cheerful today than in years."

And if this were not enough. the Pentagon is seeking ways to insure even greater profits for the weapons makers through a program entitled "Profits 76." Senator William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin, correctly calls this program "one of the biggest ripoffs the taxpayer has ever suffered

President Eisenhower, back in 1960, warned the American people of a dangerous new force, the "military-industrial complex." The de-structive influence of this en-tity, including the bribes, cost. overruns, programmed weap-ons obsolescence, and ex-treme profits, makes its dissolution a prerequisite toward achieving a major change in national priorities.

Instead of moving forcefully to encourage the development of new sources of domestic energy, the country is still relying heavily on imported oil, with all the risks that such large dependence involves. Only residual and middle-distillate alis have been decontrolled; the debate over decontrolling crude oil and oatural gas, as spurs to greater production, continues.

all, a potential disaster for the nation down the road a bit.

With respect to the current state of the economy, the nation's real growth rate slowed down sharply, as expected in the latest quarter—to an annual rate of 4.4 percent from the excessively and unsustainably high 9.2 percent pace of the first quarter. But most analysts believe the latest quarter represented a pause that will be ended in tha third and fnurth quarters of this year. It was a welcome pause that helped to keep the inflationary fires fairly well banked.

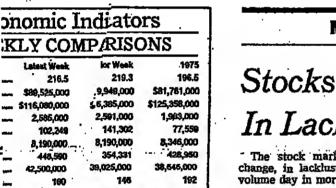

How does the United States economy look now as compared with its face just before Mr. Ford entered the White House almost two years ago? In general, it looks much better-and even more robust than it did when the recession was in its trough in the winter of 1975. Here are some comparisons of key data two years ago and today:

Latest Data Mid-1974 Gross National Product (current dollars, annual rate) $1.673 trillion $1.391 trillion Gross National Product (in 1972 dollars, annual rate) J.260 trillion 1.217 trillion Industrial Production index 129.9 124.8 Total employment 87,500,000 86,088,009 Total unemployed 7,143,000 7.5 4,769,000 Unemployment rate 5.5 Commodity Price Index 216.5 239.4 What the above table does not show, of course, are the declines that occurred in economic activity during the recession of 1973-1975 and the extent of the recovery from the low points. For instance, the real gross national product is now

8.5 percent above the low point in the recession during the first quarter of 1975 and the Industrial production index is now 16 percent up from its recession low. The unemployment rate, which reached a peak of 8.9 per-cent last May, is now down to 7.5 percent. The total number of people at work went as low as 84.1 million in March of 1975, while the number of people out of work reached a peak of 8.2 million in May of last year. Current figures are much improved.

While the Ford economic record, on balance, after two years seems much more positive than negative, it might not be sufficient to win him both the Republican nomination and election this fall. And continuance of his moderate policies might not be adequate in the future to continue the current expansion and cut unemployment.

The Dow Jones industrial average declined on threeof the five business days, closing on Friday at 990.91, down 2.30 points for the week. With small changes in the average each day, the market showed no inclination to push up to the magie 1,000 mark. On July 12, the Dow hit a 41-mooth high, closing at 1,011.21.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange, hit by the summer doldrums, sagged to 86.82 million shares from the week before'a 115.99 million. Thursday's turnover was only 15.6 million shares, the lowest since June 9, when 14.56 million changed hands.

Gold issues were among the worst performers last week, reflecting an abrupt drop in gold prices. ASA Ltd. fell 1% to 19%, Campbell Red Lake declined 1½: to 19 , Dome dropped 21/2 to 381/2 and Homestake was off 2% to 32%.

A market standout was Eastman Kodak, which wound up the week at 95%, down 5%. The announcement of. an 8 percent gain in second-quarter earnings seemed to disappoint security analysts and some lowered their projections of annual earnings for the giant photographic. nanufacturer.

The credit markets started off weak, continuing a trend shown on the previous Friday after the announcement of a large increase in the money supply. At mid-week, however, prices steadied in slow trading, and then began to rise. After the close on Thursday, this brend was underscored by the announcement of a $200 million decline in the nation's basic money supply. LEONARD SLOANE

Crawford of Trinidad Wins 100 Dash; Naber Sets Mark in Backstroke Heat

U.S. Star Goes for His Fourth Gold Medal

Special to The New York Times MONTREAL, July 24-Long John Naber, in pursuit of his fourth gold medal, set an Olympic record in qualifying heats of the 200-meter hackstroke today while East German women moved closer to more lilles.

The resumption of swimming competition at the Olympic pool, after a one-day respite, failed to change the tone of American dominance in the men's events and East German superiority amon the women.

The 6-foot-6-inch Naber. with three golds and a silver already secure, led an American sweep of the top three times in morning trials with a performance of 2 minutes 2.01 seconds. A competitive final tonight could wipe out Naher's 2:00.64 world record and perhaps produce the first sub-two-minute time in the event.

Strong qualifying efforts by Dan Harrigan of Mishawaka, Ind., (2:02.25) and Peter Rocca. of Orinda, Calif., (2:03.31) also set up the possibility of the fourth medal sweep by the American men in a final.

The United States men have won every gold medal of the first nine events. A threat to the string came from the Olympic record set by David Wilkie of Britain during beats of the 200breast-stroke

Wilkie's time, 2:18.29, was well under the times of the first three American' qualifiers. Rick Colella, John Hencken and Charles Keating. But Hencken, who qualified in 2:21.23, won the 100-breast-stroke gold medal earlier in the competition and registered a 2:18.99 earlier this year. The biggest news among

In a race of high intensity, Crawford finished inches ahead of Donald Quarrie of Jamaica. Valery Borzov of the Soviet Union, the 1972 champion. finiahed third and Harvey Glance of Phenix . City, Ala., was fourth. When Borzov won the 1972 Olympic 100 final, Crawford failed to finish

Bozov led for almost half the race. Then Crawford, who haa run for yeara on the American iodoor circuit and attended Eastern Michigan University, drove by Borzov, Ouarrie was the next to chaleinge, and he, too, fell just sbort. Crawford's time was 10.06 seconds.

The other gold-medal winners during the day were Udo Beyer of East Germany in the men's shot-put (69 feet 3/4 inch) and Ruth Fuchs of East Germany in the women's javelin throw (213-5).

The United States was shut out of the medals io the shot-put for the first time since 1936. The highest finisher among the three Amricans was Al Fuerbach of San Jose, Calif., fourth with 67-51/2.

America's best women's avelin thrower, Kathy Schmidt of Loog Beach. Calif., won the bronze medal for third place as she had in 1972. She just made it, throwing 209-10 on her sixth and last attempt.

There was a slight scare in the 400-meter burdle semifinals before the three Americans advanced to the final. Mike Shine of Youngsville, Pa., won the first heat in 49.90 aecoods, with Quentin Wheeler of Tinton Falls, N.J., fourth, just making the final in 49.22. Ed Moses of Dayton, Ohio, took the second heat by nine meters in 48.29, that third fastest in history, and he remained the favorite for the gold medal.

The Americans hope to sweep the three medals tomorrow, but Wheeler gave them a scare.

Games Being the Greatest Is Not a Handicap to Nicklaus

Jack Nicklaus is unusual off the golf course, too. This look at the private Nicklaus is excerpted from "The Missing Links: Golf and the Mind" (Atheneum, $8.95), a new book by Dr. David C. By DAVID C. MORLEY

There can be little doubt that Jack Nicklaus is the greatest golfer there has ever been. I don't think I could say that about any other athlete in any other sport. You could never, for example, convince ma that Joe Namath was a better quarterback than Dutch Clark, or that Johnny Bench was a better catcher than Mickey Cochrane. But I really believe that Jack Nichlaus could have consistently defeated any golfer in the history of the sport.

Now, I don't claim to be an expert on the inner functioning of the Nicklaus mind, hut, in my brief encounters with him, several things have emerged that, if they are not the basis of his genius, must at least reinforce it in a special way. Of all the golf superstars I have met, Nicklaus seems the least affected by his greatness. Many great achievers have an unusual kind of self-consciousness that makes them appear almost aloof, which is understandable when you consider the amount of fuss that people make over them. It must become boring for celebrities to meet so many people who just want to be able to tell others that they shook hands, etc.

I have seen Nicklaus in those situafor in his continuing success. His resistance to the temptation of becoming a god is the chief reason why Nicklaus is less vulnerable than most superstars to being affected by the deified—and phony—stratum in which many celebrities exist. So far, his ex-traordinary self-bonesty has allowed him to live at the same level, in terms of self-extern as that at minic most of self-esteem, as that at which most And there are a lot of people like this, because it's impressive when you people live. Mailbox: The American Way Receives an Olympic-Size Challenge

To the Editor:

Some of the underdeveloped countries are nearing sports equality with the United States, while the Socialist countries have overtaken the United States in many Olympic sports. Americans deserve a better answer as to why this is true rather than the long, selfserving alibi and sour-grape description of Soviet sports in your July 11 issue. Almost as important as winning Is knowing how to behave after losing.

Robin Herman examines the Soviet way of sport without describing the main focus of sport in the Socialist countries, which is to engage everyone in sport. Thus the right to sport is law in the Soviet Union, Cuba and the other Socialist countries. In the German Democratic Republic, in Article 18 of the constitution, it is stated, "Physical culture, sport and tourism as elements of Socialist culture shall serve the universal, physical and mental develop-ment of citizens."

For Robin Herman to state "the So-

Today in the Unitd States we see a similar type of mass participation in basketball, long-distance running, track and, to a lesser degree, Swimming. These are events the United States is very strong in.

For the United States to compete with the Socialist countries, our Government must spend money on mass sport programs, both in the 23 Olympic sports, and the other sports. The Presi dent's Committee on Olympic Sports is gathering information to revitalize the United States Olympic movement. It is obvious that this means money for parks, playgrounds, public gyms, coaches, facilities for women and health

What's So Patriotic About Sports Event?

To the Sports Editor.

To the gung-ho, John Wayne-Kate Smith-type patriot, anyone who ques-tions the sacrosanct character of our national anthem merits a C.J.A. dossier plus, of course, round-the-clock surveillance.

Given this risk, I still ouestion the relevance of the anthem as a preluce to every routine sports event. There is a time and place for it; for example, July 4, the Olympics, a Bicentennial celebra-tion, any occasion of historic signifi-cance and the like. But by no intelligent standard can the anthem be deemed appropriate to an everyday, commercial sport event. If anything, the dignity and solemnity of the anthem are diluted and corrupted by its stereotyped use for any run-of-the-mill, commercial enterprise. Let us by all means play and sing

While George Steinbrenner, despite his legal hassles, continues to gamely spend needed money for available talent to "hring a winner to New York," the catatonic Mets offer a token bid at best on the likes of Catfish Hunter, Andy Messersmith, Dick Allen, Rollie Fingers Joe Rudi and Vida Blue. This type of quality ballplayer just doesn't seem to appeal to Joe MacDonald and M. Donald Grant, who prefer to make three-time Cy Young winner, Tom Seaver, grovel for the S200,000 he well deserves, a yearly sum the Texas Rangers were glad to pay an inferior Bert Blylevan.

Yet the Mets are in desperate need of players of the caliber mentioned above. In need of a top flight pitcher, do they make a realistic monetary offer for an available quality player with money they have readily available? No.

'A Little Giri'

Yet many persons who have come in contact with Miss Comaneci, away from the arens, contend that under the intense, aloof exterior, she is basically "a little girl." Part of Miss Comaneci's strength is that she loves to compete, that she would do the same flawless routine with no one in the stands as she does in front of 18,000 cheering spectators. "She has a fantastic mind."

said Hill, who was one of the first Americans to spot Miss Comancei's potential several years ago during a tour in Rumania, "She can block out the whole world. It's just ber and the apparatus." Nowbere was Nadia's power of concentration more pronounced than during the Olympic competition at The Forum. She seldom bothered to watch any other routines, except perhaps those of team-like chalking the har-almost anything to keep her mind active. Although a rule was drawn up to prohibit gym-nasts from leaving their seats, it was never enforced, primarily because the star never sat down.

Miss Comaneci also is meticulous, another trait of tha perfectionist. She seldom begins a routine unless everything feels right. Sometimes she will stand in front of an apparatus for what seems like minutes until she is certain that all the elements are in place: is the crowd quiet, are the hands and feet loose enough, is the bar chalked, what about the dismount?

The Collector Even the dolls from over 60 countries that she collects at home are lined up neatly on a shelf in her room: When she is old enough to take cosmetics seriously, you can bet they will be applied with care.

Because she is so commit-ted, Miss Comanecl can look herself differently than spectators enthralled by the prospect of a perfect score. She no looger is awed by the prospect of achieving another 10 in the uneven bars because, as she says, "It is really nothing new."

MONTREAL, July 24-A guy from Germany said he was taking a poll and needed an American opinion: would the Olympic Games survive or collapse? Would there be another carnival four years hence in Moscow and if sn, what about 1984? If the American had in bet, would he bet that Olympics would take place in 1984? The Jeux de la XXIIe Olympiade are a week old, and nobody is surprised that two dozen nations bave walked out in protest, that a fencer was caught cheating and sent away in disgrace, that some judges are incompetent and some less that perfectly impartial, that conflicting ideologies have collided head-on and there bave beeo quarrels and clashes and charges of unsports-manlike conduct. The big news is that competition has reached the halfway point in spite of these distractions.

"We had the first of the daily elevatur breakdowns about 10 minutes ago," said Tim Horgao of Boston this morning. "If you thought you were in Hook and Ladder Co. No. 2, that was the emergency call bells."

Excitable is the word for the Hotel Meridien's self-service elevators. But Mootreal's newest botel provides creature comforts, courteous service and excellent food. Partly because the credited press outnumbers competitors by a thousand or so and partly because of security measures made iodispensable by the massacre of Israelis in Munich four years ago, interviewing athletes can be difficult, but the Olympics in ancieot Greece had an official corps of whip-bearers to keep order, and it is said a master threatened a slave with a trip to Olympia as punishment for

It's a Women's Olympics, Despite the Politics and U.S. Men Swimme

They turned ioto the second week of perform-ances today, and the stage was being cleared for the "big boys" in basketball, boxing and track. But in the streets of Montreal and the corridors of the $685 million Olympic Stadium, most of the talk and emotional response were lavished on the women -Kornelia Ender's winning, Shirley Babashoff's losing, women athletes were supply-ing more theatrics in a show marked by raging extremes: 186 events in 21 sports 27 centuries after the ancient Greeks started it all with a 200-yard race during a religious festival from which women were barred eveo as spectators.

The extremes are more pronounced than ever now, even in downtown Montreal. In the great Beslica opposite Dominico Square, red Olym-pic banners with the five intertwined circles flank the main altar from ceiling to floor. But in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel across the street, every entrance is blocked by soldiers who require all visiitors to pass through metal-detecting devices.

That is, the Canadians are afraid of terrorism from abroad and bave spent $140 million to prevent the kind of violence that cost the lives of 11 Israeli athletes at the last Olympics in Munich in 1972. And yet the most ironic threat of disruption this weekend came from local taxicab drivers, who were aogry because their business was ruined by fleets of "official" cars and the freesbuttle service provided for so many persons working at the games.

In the midst of the extremes and disputes, the wo-men then stepped into the spotlight. Nadia knocked off perfect scores in gymnastics while Olga wept in the wings. Shirley observed that "Ender works very hard at the beginning of a race, then dies at the end," and then Ender at her at the end. The een beat her at the end. The Queen and her family charmed the multitudes by dropping in unnounced to see the swimming, then later set-tied back for the equestrian events and watched the Princess on her horse. Qualifying Efforts High

The morning was typically Montreal-sunny, warm (80 degrees) and humid (71 percent). The program was thin but the quality of performers was high. All Americans and all foreign favorites advanced in the qualifying round of the men's discus and pole vault. Mac Wilkins, John Powell and Jay Silverster moved into the discus fical tomorrow and Dave Roberts, Earl Bell and Terry Porter qualified for the pole-vault final on Monday. Wilkins led the discus qual ifying with a throw of 224 feet, an Olympic record, Silvester was at 203-7 and Powell 201-8. The qualifying standard was196-10, and a ribbon on the field marked that distance. Anyone who threw over the line made the final. Fifteen succeeded, Wilkins on his first throw.

Qualifying was simple in the pole vault, too. Anyona who cleared 16-834 made the final, and 20 men did. Among them were Roberts, a 25year-old student at the University of Florida's medical school; Beli, a 20-year-old senior at Arkansas State, and 24-year-old Terry Porter of Fort Worth.

The Denials

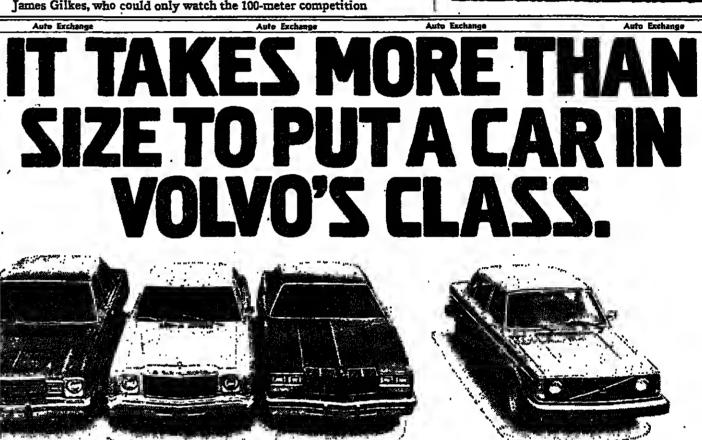

Onother sprinter, Bob Martin of Canada, also was watching and wonder-ing what might have been, but he deserved to watch. Bob Martin was expelled yesterday from Canada's team for sheltering in the Olympic Village an American friend named Paull Wilk-inson, a former Uoiversity of Oregon teammate. Perhaps if Bob Martin had confessed immediately, he would merely bave been reprimanded. But he repeatedly denied to Canadian, officials that the ineligible visitor had stayed in bis room for the last week. He reported-ly even denied that a person named Paul Wilkinson existed.

"Because of his insistence at telliog lies," Maurice Alloo, the Canadian Olympic official was quoted, "his federatioo felt be could not remain. The lies had 90 percent of the bearing on his expulsion."

Bob Martin's explianation as that, "I wasn't trying to perpertrate a hoax, I wasn't trying to be malicious, I wasn't tryiog to test security, it was just a silly thing." Apparently he was just finding a place to stay for a college buddy, and that's understandable. His first mistake was denying his involvement. But his bigger mistake was mentioning that "this kind of thing was done so much in "Munich" four years ago. That's where Bob Martin violated not only the rules of the Olympic Village but also violated the memory of the Munica massacre.

And so James Gilkes and Bob Martin watched today's 100-meter final, James Gilkes deserved better. Bob Martin did individual gold medal," Nelson said, "and this is her best opportunity to do it." The decisioo to scratch

Miss Babashoff, although she has no medical problems, may be without precedent for an American swimmer in an Olympics. It also is certain to produce some protest from friends of Bonni Glasgow of Baltimore, the fourth-place finisher in the 400-individual medley at the United States trials.

If Miss Babashoff had de-cided not to enter the 400-individual medley bere, Miss Glasgow might have received tha third spot on the United States team.

"It oever occurred to Shirley not to swim it here," Nelson said. "It's a decisioo that could not have been made until now."

There is little doubt that American officials are uneasy over the East German medal haul in the women's events, just as the East German's have been jealous of the string of world record performances by United States

The decision by Rolad Matthes, the former Olympic backstroke king from East Germany, to scratch from trials of the 200-backstroke today was a coocession to Naber's overwhelming superiority.

Roger Pyttel's failure to koger rytter's failure to survive opening heats of the 100-freestyle today, although he had one of the world's faster times this year, also may have mystified East Ger-man coachas Buttel's time to man coaches. Pyttel's time to-day, 53.93, was almost two seconds slower than his best performance this year and well under the 51.47 of Joe Bottom of Santa Cara, the leader in the trials.

Naber has been the hig man for the United States in more ways than his rangy. frame. A gold medal tonight would put the Menlo Park, Calif., resident io such select company as Don Schollander, who won four gold medals in swimming at the 1964 Tokyo Games, Mark Spitz, who collected seven gold medals in Munich, is the only other swimmer to surpass this feat.

Security Breakdown Is Rare at Olympics

Special to The New York Times

MONTREAL, July 24-Canada has spent $100 million in assembling a 16,000-man security force for the Olympics. And there are eveo Jet fighter planes on standby in case of violation of air space over the Games sites such as Mootreal and Bromont, Quebec, and Kingston, Ootario, woere the equestrian events are being held. Still there are some breakdowns and some seemingly unnecessary precautions.

precautions. Because of one breakdown, Canada's Olympic Asso-ciatioo expelled Bob Martin, a top sprinter, hours before he was to compete in the 100 meters yesterday for smug-gling a friend into the Olympic Village. The imposter was Paul Wilkinson, a physical educaton teacher from Eugene, Ore., who had been staying with the team—undetected by the security officers—since July 14. Then there's the case of Pat Neesbam, an Australian who came here to be near her busband, David, the captain of the water mole team. She says Olympic Security officers

"We didn't get a medal but I'm proud of what we did," salo 343-pound Pete Lee, United States heavyweight wrestler, after he and Brad Rheingans, last hopes for the first United States medal ever in Olympic Greco-Roman, were both eliminated last night. In the 1972 Olympics the United States team won a total of two matches. This year's team finished 12-19.

After last oight, the Soviet team with wrestlers among the three finalists in each of the five weight classes, were shoo-ins for medals. The only questions being which medals, and Jim Peckman, the United States manager, made this ob-servation on their readiness: "The Russians came bere with 10 wrestlers and 11 coaches. That should tell you something about their program."

Peter Kormann, the winner of the first Uoited States medal in men's gymnastics since 1932, realized he had to do something spectacular to get the attention of the judges, even if he came up with egg oo his face.

That's why the 21-year-old from Braintree, Mass., picked his most spectacular move, a full twisting, double back on the mount for his opening gambit. Then after he'd dooe it perfectly, he did it again to wrap up a 9.8 score from the judges, and ultimately third-place bronze medal

"But it was taking a risk because I hadn't done ooe since I hurt my ankle a couple of months ago," said Kormann, a student at Southern Conoecticut State. "I tried it twice in practice and crashed landed flat on my face. Maybe this will open the eyes amoog the judges. Maybe some people will say now: 'Hey the U.S.A. is pretty good.'"

Terms of Baseball's New Four-Year Accord Explained

By MURRAY CHASS

Sometime in the first half of next November, a player draft that could be the most intriguing in sports history will be held to determine which clubs will compete for which free-agent baseball players.

Drafts of college players and drafts to stock expansion teams have their own particular significance and interest, but the players available in those selection sys-tems are players who are untried on the professional level or who are well on their way out of the professional level.

Baseball's negotiation-rights draft, on the other hand, could feature a significant number of the game's stars-Fred Lynn, Reggie Jackson, Dick Allen, Joe Rudi, Bobby Grich, Carlton Fisk, Dave Cash, Ken Holtzman and Rollie Fingers, for example.

The mechanics of the negotiation-rights draft were outlined in copies of the new four-year agreement that were mailed to the 600 major league players late last week. Marvin Miller and John Gaherin, chief negotiators for the players and the owners, respectively, have steadfastly re-fused to disclose the terms until the players add their ratification to the owners', but a copy of the agreement was obtained by The New York Times. Second Trading Period

Virtually all the key terms of the revolutionary agreement have been previously disclosed. These include the right of an unsigned player to become a free agent at the end of this season, a signed player to become a free agent after playing out the renewal year in his current contract and, under future contracts, a player with six years' major league service to become a free agent by notifying his club in writ-ing after the season that be wants to be a free agent. No option year or advance notice is necessary under the future system.

A player with five years' major league service has the right to demand a trade at the end of a season, and he may list a maximum of six clubs to which he doesn't want to be traded. If he isn't traded by the following March 15, he becomes a free agent.

To facilitate trades of any kind, a second interleague trading period, from Feb. 15 through March 15, was adopted. The first runs from the end of the World Series to the end of baseball's winter meetings in December and always produces the bulk of the trades made during the year.

Guidelines also were established for the right of a player to repeat a trade demand or to become a free agent again: from free to free agency an additional five years each, and from free agency to trade de-mand and trade demand to trade de-mand and trade demand to trade demand, three years each.

For several years, owners had tried to reduce the size of the roster from 25 players to 24 or 23, and they finally made a slight gain in that direction. The new agreement calls for a maximum roster of 25 players and a minimum of 24. If a roster falls below 24, a team has 48 hours, in addition to the time it takes a player to report, to restore the number to 24. Because of the approximately 40 players who are unsigned this season, some rosters. will look different next season, whether each has 24 or 25 players.

Many of these unsigned players, of course, may sign contracts before the end of the season and thereby relinquish their free-agency eligibility. For those who remain unsigned, though, the commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, will hold a negotiation-rights draft, sometime between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15.

Compensation Provisions

The procedure will be the same each of the four years of the agreement, except that there will be no compensation from a player's new team to his old one under current contracts. Players becoming free agents under future contracts will be com-pensated for by choices in the Jone draft of high school and college players.

At the negotiation-rights draft, the clubs a will select in the inverse order of their finish in the standings. Selections will be alternated by leagues.

Each club will be able to select nego-tiating rights to as many players as it desires, but a player will be removed from the eligibility list when 12 clubs (13 next year, after expansion) have designated him.

A free agent, no matter how talented he is, won't necessarily have to deal with the bottom 12 teams. Each team will name one player in each round, and, if there are enough star players available, as there could be this year, the first 12 clubs to choose aren't likely to select rights to the same player. Depending on the number of free agents available and their caliber, it very likely could take three or more rounds for one player to be designated by 12 teams, and these teams could run from the 24th to the first.

No matter how many players a team designates, there is a maximum number it may sign—one if there are one to 14.

With one out in the second, Cecil Cooper lofted a deep fly to right-center. Bernhardt, a last-minute re-placement for Lou Piniella in right, slowed up on the ball and it dropped near the wall for a double. Cooper, however, kept running for third. Rivers relayed to Stanley, who got the ball to Nettles at third considerably before Cooper.

The Yankee management declined to commeot yesterday on some criticism deliv-ered by Nettles, one of thive unsigned Yankees (the others are Ken Holtzman, Doyle ers are Ken Holtzman, Doyle Alexander, Sandy Alomar and Elliott Maddox). Nettles, 32 years old, said the Yan-kees were not negotiating with him because they thought be did not have many playing years left. He also complained that the club was willing to pay millions for free agents or players on other teams but were not offering their long-standing regulars equivalent pay.

was hailed as a genius and as the "best" manager around.

But less than two years after he led the 1967 Red Sox into the World Series, he was in disfavor in Boston and dropped before the 1969 season ended.

In 1971, Charley Finley hired him to manage the Oakland A's, who had played under nine managers (one of them twice) in the preceding 10 seasons. Under Williams, the A's finished first in the Western Division in 1971, then won the World Series in 1972 and 1973.

Friction With Finley

However, Williams had friction with Finley, as many other managers have had, and quit at the end of the 1973 season, even though he had just signed a long-term contract.

He then accepted an offer to manage the Yankees, to replace Ralph Houk, but Fin-ley refused to release Wil-liams from his obligation and got a court order to prevent him from going to New York. So Williams, at the peak of managerial success and prestige, sat out the first half of the 1974 season in Florida, while Bill Virtion became manager of a Yankee team manager of a rankee team that went down to the last day of the season before los-ing the Eastern division title to Baltimore. And Alvin Dark, taking over the A's,

From the standpoint of sights only slightly in assign-ing weights to there three caodidates. Instead of con-ceding oolish Pleasure nine pounds, Forego was asked to yield one pound less. Lord Rebeau had a two-pound advantage over his impost in the Suburban with 114 chalk players in yesterday's turnout of 30,364, the results of the program's first two races were disappointing. October House's $15.20-for-$2 May I Rule captured the opener and Sigmuod Som-mer's Bi Bidder ($11.40) took the second race. The combination, (-2) returned $114.40 for a $2 daily double ticket.

Dr. Gideoo Ariel is now offering to perform his spaceage analysis on all United States Olympic track and field team members, if the United States Olympic Committee will approve. Ariel is a 37-year-old scientist from Tel Aviv, who bas degrees in exercise science and computer science. His research over the last 10 years covers what makes up the perfect track and field performance, although his methods can be applied to any form of human activity, from walking to poundiog stakes in the ground. "The laws of physics apply to all body motion," he said, "and in track and field the motions are usually analyzed by coaches with the human eye. They see some things, but they do not see other things that might be very critical to an athlete's performance He said tiny flaws were ofgood performance and a world record. A discus-thrower, Mac Wilkios, and sbot-putter, Terry Albritton, both credit Ariel with discovering minute errors they eventually corrected. Wilkins receatly threw the discus 232 feet 6 inches for a world record and Albritton did 71-8¼ in the shot-put for a world mark.

Ariel said he determined "where the joints move, in exactly what direction, so we can calculate the velocity of each part of the hody, "For example, Bill Schmidt was throwing the javelin a little bit wrong in 1972. The computer said he should be able to break the world record but he was throwing 30 or 40 feet under it. But the computer also showed the tip of the javelin was rising too much just before he released

The computer showed that he was dipping his right leg at the release point and he was sinking a little—like throwing from a falling ele-vator. The javelin was moving up." Schmidt was made aware of the motion, corrected it and wound up by winning a bronze medal in the 1972 Munich Olympics.

"We have a strong team." de Nemethy said before bead-ing for Montreal. "We should be a contender for the gold medal. But of course no one knows what will happen on a given day. In the equestrian world, you know, the horse is the big factor. And he can't tall you when he's sick or out of sorts."

De Nemethy, whose team lost the gold medal to West Germany by just one-quarter of a fault in the 1972 Games, ticked off four countries that could win the gold medal this year.

"West Germany should be the favorite," he said. "But we are a contender and so are Italy and France. The West German team appears to have the most experience. They have the same problem as most of us, their horses. They'll be using most of the same horses they had in 1972. They need some "But on the other hand, a lot in something like the Olympics: De Nemethy said the United States horses were considerably less experienced than in the past.

"We don't have ooe big standout," he said. "In other days, we have come up with horses like San Lucas and Snowbound. Still, we have the best available."

This will mark the first Olympics in which Frank Chapot has acted as captain of the team. In other years, it has been Steinkrzus, now retired as an active rider and serving as president of the team.

"Frank's a remarkable rider," de Nemethy said. "He's experienced and knows what to do with a horse. I put him on a horse called Viscount at Cologne, the last show of our European tour last spring. It was in the Grand Prix and marked the first time Frank had ridden Viscount in that kind of competitioo. He finished a remarkable fourth."

The other riders on the team are Buddy Brown, Den-nis Murphy, Bob Ridland and Mike Matz.

Bronze Most Likely Winnett realizes that the United States dressage rid-ers are far from the favor-ites. But be's still confident. "Realistically." he said be-fore heading for the Games,

"we know we won't win the gold or silver medals. But the bronze, that's enother the bronze, that's another story. We feel we have a shot

"Of course, all of us [Edith Master, Dorothy Morkis and Hilda Gurney, his teamnates] will have to be in top form at the same time. "But that's not impossible. After all, the same cooditions hold for all the teams. All of us think we have improved considerably.

"West Germany definitely should wio the team gold medal and they are talking shout the Russians winning the silver and the individual gold. Well, that may be.

How to Approach Accurately: Use Landmarks, Know Limits

By NICK SEITZ The late Chris Dunphy, the benevolent dictators who ran the Seminole Golf Club in Florida, had a favorite cluba 6-wood. He knew exactly how far he could hit it, and he used it shrewdly to win many a money game. Dunphy liked to go out early in the morning and po-sition the tee markers himself. If he hand an important match that day, so the story goes, the par-3 holes would just happen to play the pre-cise distance Dunphy could hit his 6-wood.

Weekend golfers could use that kind of help. We often lose strokes because we misjudge the distance on ap-proach shots or pick the wrong club or both, particularly on strange courses. The touring pros have a built-in advantage over the rest of us. Their caddies research yardages that are accurate to the inch. Where you and I are guessing, Jack Nicklaus knows it is 1731/2 yards to the pin. He can choose a club and swing it with confidence. How can we judge distance and club ourselves better? First determine how far you hit each club. It does no good to know your target is 1731/2 yards away if you have no idea whether you should hit a 5-iron or a 5-wood from that distance.

If you play most of your golf on one course, work out the vardage to the green from conspicuous landmarks on par-4 and par-5 holes. If it's 140 yards from the tall tree on the 14th fairway to the green, you should be aware of that checkpoint.

Bcar in mind that the location of the cup can make a difference of two and three clubs on today's big greens. A green that is 100 feet deep

Answer: Those between 18 and 21 years of age. They are too old for the juniors, yet aren't experienced enough to get into major tournaments.

There is a large body of players in that category. Now, finally, they are getting an opportunity for recognition as the new 21-years-andunder division opened its circuit yesterday.

"The division will provide opportunities for many more good players who need exposure," says Star Malless, president of the United States Tennis Association. "In the past, only a handful of young players those on the Junior Davis Cup and Junior Wightman Cup teams-could get that exposure."

of three women to obtain licenses to judge boxing from the New York State Athletic Commission. Carol Polis was the first woman boxing judge to be licensed by the commis-sion, on Oct. 2, 1974. Mrs. Shain and Carol Castellano were both licensed on Oct. 1, 1975.

And now Mrs. Shain, in hcr late 40s, believes that judging boxing is something she was destined to do. 'A Critic's Eye'

"I always tried to pick out the more aggressive fighter, then wait to hear the judges' de-cisions at the end of the bout to see how closely they coincided with my own.

New to group travel, the author was wary: then 14 elephants stopped by for a drink.

T-shirt had already caused some comments.

been given $100 by the tour company for his troubles.)

We were off! We really were, and we had barely finished our infroductioos. Sarah, Victor, Susao, Kevin, Tonl, Carol and Frank. For the next 10 days the occupants of Bus 4 rode together, squabbled, bitched and joked together, generally ate lunch together, often ate dinner together, and together experienced an inundation of visual terrace at Voi, an elegant wood and stone lodge in Tsavo East National Park, your very first night on safari, when without warning 14 elephants arrive to drink at e water hole a few yards away.

What do you do when 14 elephants stop by unexpectedly after dinner? In my case, I dropped my coffee cup and my companions, scrambled down a cipitous flight of stone steps to a upon before the message got through to the Italian. They formed a defensive perimeter with stunning precision, waited it out for a nervous stretch and departed-backwards and watchfully. I returned to my cold coffee, and an argument over whether elephants were really matriarchal.

Voi, perhaps because it was the first lodge we stayed at, remains the most vivid. At 4 A.M., still wide awake from a combination of elephants, .arguments, Italians and jet lag, I trained my binoculars on a berd of Cape buffalo drinking and wallowing in a muddy pool in view of my window. When light dawned, they silently moved away, like somnambulists. As 1 watched the last movements of the Continued on Page 12

What follows ia a suggested rough itinerary of a summer journey through the uncrowded West-a pilgrimage to sceoic spots that even at the height of the tourist season ara apt to be fairly peaceful. I believe them to be equal, in terms of natural splendor, to their heavily-trafficked cousins. And the joy of discovering them without bumper-to-bumper company can make them eveo more pleasurable. I would suggest that anyone planning to follow the entire itinerary should figure on a minimum of 21 days for the trip.

The itinerary follows a squiggly sort of long oval beginning and ending in Denver. Motela and campgrounds can be found within striking distance of. eech destinction. You might have to take a graded dirt road to reach one, but those dirt roads often explain why auch spots are still relatively quiet. Be adventurous. Take hiking boots. Carry a jug of water. In plotting a route from one to the other on a map, you might find you have to double back over a road in order to reach every destinatioo. So what? It's worth the effort. If you measure your enjoyment by miles-per-hour, these places aren't for you. If you'd rather be the first in your neighborhood to see the Canyon de Chelly rather than the last to see the Grand Canyon, reed on.

A few final preliminary notes: I've deliberately left out northeromost Montana and Idaho, southernmost Arizona and New Mexico, and Nevada because they would make the oval simply too huge. Also, I would recommend that you call ehead a few days for overnight reservationa since accommodationa are oot exactly abundant (the standard guidebooks like Fodor, AAA and Mobil are usually reliable for names of motels or campgrounds).

Introduction-Colorado Rockies: If you've flown to Denver, pick up your rental car at the airport and get right on Interstate 70 West. In a balf-hour you'll be climbing out of the smog into the Rockies. Somewhere neer Buffalo Bill's grave on Lookout Mountain, 20 miles from Denver, the road bits a rise aod suddenly, the oaked graylavender (sometimes snow-capped) peaks of the Continental Divide loom across the windshield like a Cinemascope postcard.

Turn north ooto U.S. 40 toward Empire, zigzag through Berthoud Pass, gape at the classic profiles of mountains studded with aspens and conifers, keep going through Granby, turn north on State Routa 125 to Waldeo and then fork to the right onto State Route 127 to get to the Wyoming line. Coogratulations - you have just crossed the Continental Divide twice, bypassed Rocky Mountain National Park and not collected $200.

The Snowy Range: Route 130 through Medicine Bow National Forest. Thia is lovely tundra country comparable to that along Trail Ridge Road in Rocky Mountain National Park. Pick a bouquet of wildflowers for your picnic lunch table. Have a snowball fight, especially since it's summer. (It isn't called the Snowy Range for nothing.) Atlantic City and South Pass City: Marjane Ambler, an editor of the weekly environmental nawspaper, High Country News, published in Lander, Wyo., doesn't want you to know about Wyoming's Atlantic City. Continued on Page 14

Letters: Is Tipping Getting Out of Hand?

To the Editor.

We are thinking of going to Europe or South America and are reading travel books on various countries. Why do travel writers suggest that Ameri-cans tip an additional 5 to 15 percent for service on top of the already steep 15 to 20 percent added to the botel and restaurant bills?

In speaking to foreigners and in reading travel books designed for foreigners, no such suggestion is made. In instances where a hotel or restaurant does not automatically add a service charge, they are told to tip what they like.

Tipping should be done modestly. It's getting ridiculously out of hand. In fact, it's enough to make one think twice about traveling. Do travel writers expect us to support foreign waiters, cab drivers, maids, theater ushers, porters, toilet attendants, barbers, windshield cleaners, concierges, doormen, and so on and on and on? Aren't European prices already high enough?

TONY MARINO

New York

The European Travel Commission which represents 23 Western European countries, says tipping practices wary from country to country and from establishment to establishment within the country. In general, however, where a service charge is added, it amounts to not more than 15 percent. This is generally distributed among the staff; if the waiter's service is particularly good, however, it is customary to leave an additional 5 percent or so for him. If service is not included, the normal tip is about 15 percent, as it is in the United States. The best advice is to get in touch with the national tourist office of the country you're visiting and ask what the practice is

For one travel writer's view, see Temple Fielding who in his "Guide to Europe" says: "Every human being who serves you will proffer a hand with stunning rapidity. You can't beat the Egyptians, French and Italians: They've got a unique nose for the gratuity. There's no use bucking the system . . . The French Finance Ministry once estimated . . . that Frenchmen dispense an average of 328 tips annually to members of 36 professions.

If you, the foreigner, don't double these numbers within your first 24 hours in France, consider yourself either stingy or infirm."-Ed.]

BATTLEFIELDS

To the Editor

Sol Stember, in his article, "Battlefields for the Biceotennial" (Travel Section, July 4), stated that the Princeton Battlefield had no toilets and that Princeton had no visitor's center. There are in fact two visitor's centers, one for the town as a whole and one for the battlefield alone. Both bave come into being in the last two months.

The town's Biceotennial Visitor's Center is the 50-year-old Princeton Railroad Station, which was rehabilitated in June and is manned by volunteers who provide visitors with walking tours of town. The ceoter is located on University Place, next to Princeton University's McCarter Theater, and is easily accessible from U.S. 1, via Alexander Road.

The battlefield's Visitor's Center is the Thomas Clarke House, and its adjaceot carriage bouse bas newly installed toilets for visitors. The carriage house is characterized as an Interpretation Center and has been designed to give visitors a real understanding of the events that occurred here six months short of 200 years ago.

One further oote: the "classic Greek Rotunda" referred to by Mr. Stember is not a rotunda at all, but a colonnade, the entrance to the commoo gravesite of American and British soldiers killed in the battle.

RICHARD W. BAKER JR. Princeton Battlefield Area Preservation Society JOHN C. BAKER, President, Greater Princeton Jaycees

Mr. Stember replies: I am happy to learn that visitors' facilities are now available in Princeton and at the battlefield. I stand corrected on the colonnode, but according to a plaque on the site, only the American dead are buried there: British dead are buried between two yew trees closer to Mercer Road. The topography of the field has remained intact, but a number of 18th-century features are missing, including the road that then led into

HOVERCRAFT TO GROW

The two Hovercraft that skim above the waters of the English Channel between Dover and the French ports of Calais and Boulogne are to be "stretched" next fall. Each of the two craft is to have a 55-foot-long section added in the middle, increasing its capacity from 254 to 416 passengers and from 30 to 60 automobiles, According to an official of BritRail, which operates the Hovercraft with the French, the extended craft will take rougher seas and make faster crossings in bad weather in 1977, The craft, which float on a cushion of air above either land or sea, provide a daily link for rail passengers and drivers between Loodon and the Continent. Some examples of fares: Loodon-Paris, second class, one way, $36.30; London-Boulogne, $24.90; Loodon-Brussels, $28.10. Passengers who want to travel only between Dover and Calais or Boulogne pay $17.70 for the round trip. There is also a one-day round-trip excursion fare-the ticket is available only in Britain-between Dover and Calais or Boulogne of about $12.75. Children's fares are about two-thirds of the adult rate.

RAIL-BUS TICKET

Amtrak, the rail passenger service, and Greybound, the bus line, have ioaugurated intermodal service between New York and New England. Amtrak has also linked up with the Bopanza bus line to provide intermodal service to Cape Cod. The Amtrak-Greyhound link makes it possible for the first time for passengers to travel oo a single bus-rail ticket and transfer easily from one service to the other at Boston's South Station.

any of these had to do would be done oo this square.

Thinking about them walking across the piazza toward the Palazzo Vecchio, I noticed that there was more movement in the square now; dawn had become morning. Cleaning squads were at work in tha three banks across the square, readying the banks for their early (8:20 A.M.) opening to the public. Shutters began to roll up here and there, unveiling the shops and bars. The owner of the Bargello restaurant arrived with cartons of foodstuffs and kindly let me slt on. Employees filed into the Palazzo Vecchio. The building is as important today as it was centuries ago, object of much national and even international curiosity; Florence's Communist Mayor, a nononsense young executive named Elio Gabbuggiani, presides over a coalition of Communist and Socialist city councilmen.

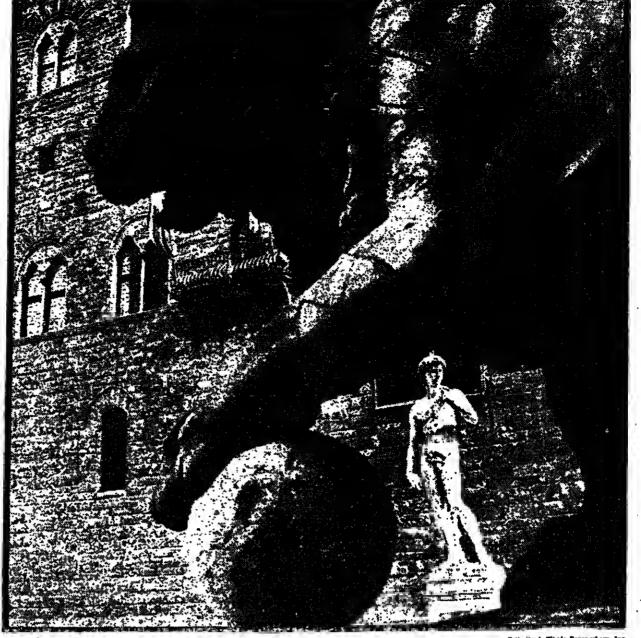

On this square a tourist can eat and drink, buy a newspaper, souvenirs or travel books, postcards (at the klosk on the northwest corner) and stamps (at the tobacco shop just behind it), even film or sunglasses (at an optician's in the Assicurazioni Generali huilding). The square contains only one shlock shop (expensive reproductions and still worse original art, souvenirs ranging from porcelain animals to Chianti wine). Just 25 feet off the plazza, technically at the beginning of the Via dei Calzaiuoli, there is a pharmacy open 24 hours a day.

But the most significant shop on the square is one that I hadn't noticed at all, for it was just behind my back as I sat at the Bargello table. The Agenzia Enologica Italiana bears a name and displays wares that many tourists will not be able to identify at all. "Oenological" is, of course, a Latin-rooted word for that which has to do with wine. This firm, whose sign says that it was founded in 1874, deals in paraphernalia for winegrowers and winemakers: pressing and distilling equipment, bottles and corks and corking machines, and how-to books to go with the machinery. The people who hegin frequeoting the shop in the early morning say a good deal more about the real nature of Florence and its province than the tourist facilities already mentioned. They are the Tuscan winegrowers, with gnarled fists and creased faces, product of a lifetime of long days in sun and rain (more often the former than the latter). Tuscany is above all an agricultural center and has been so since the Etruscans farmed it, Produce includes grains, sugar beets, but the most important is wine grapes-this is Chianti country

The replica of Michelangelo's David stands guard at the medieval Palazzo Vecchio, where the Medicis once lived.

Later that day, lunching at the same restaurant table, I tried to see the square not as a tourist might, but as could appear to the Tuscan farmer or worker or businessman. I saw a vast L-shaped square whose buildings were of varying styles but similar enough in height and other proportions, and in their rust-colored stone or stucco finish, to seem to co-exist harmony. On this closer look, the huilding to my immediate left (with "Assicurazioni Generali-Venezia" boldly lettered on the facade) seemed overly pretentious. The ground floor of this late 19th-century imitation of a Renaissance palace contains the IS Rivoire co bronze horse is close enough to the window so that it can be taken in almost in the same eyeful as Giovanni da Bologna's equestrian statue of Cosimo de Aledici on the square below. The museum is open from 9 A.M. to 7 P.M. weekdays, 9 to 12 Sundays; closed Tuesdays, Admission: 100 lire (about 10 cents, as of this writing).

Farther along the piazza, No. 7 is the 16th-century Palazzo Uguccioni, whose elaborate facade of lonic and Corinthian columns may have been designed by Michelangelo. I peered into this building too, and found it to be a busy 20th-century office huilding, with an elevator and the offices of real estate agency, a surgeon, an electrician, a dancing school, the Florence chapter of the Italian Hunting Association. The only sign of tourist business was the office of a student travel organization. , The 14th-century Tribunale di Mercanzia, that magnificently venerable structure at No. 10, was also a hubbub of activity. Once the tradesmen's court -the arms of Florence's 21 crafts are still lined up on the fecade-it has housed since 1907 the headquarters of the province's agricultural organiza-tions, farmers' unions and cooperative insurance agencies. Now it was time to look, inside the Palazzo Vecchio, hut first I passed the statue of a lion known as the Marzocco, a copy of a Donatello sculpture. Thoogh it is dwarfed by Michelangelo's David and the other statuary on the square and in the adjacent Loggia, it is the symbol of the city's power. I once read that prisoners from the rival city-state of Pisa bad been forced to kiss its behind.

Entering the main portal, I crossed the first patio with its bronze cherub fountain designed by Vasari, the centerpiece by Verocchio, bas relief columns, a vaulted ceiling in the grotesque manner. I passed through a series of courtyards and found myself in an office area closed to the public.

Even though the public may visit only 30 percent of the entire area of this palazzo that covers a large city block, I learned from city architect Piero Auchen, director of the rine Arts office, that nearly 80 percent of the monumental halis-those of artistic value-are now open to visitors. (Weekdays, 9 A.M. to 7 P.M.; Sundays, 9-12; closed Saturdays. Admission: about 25 cents, Sundays free.) The Sala dei Dugento is used for monthly meetings of the city council, and visitors are permitted into this room when the council is in session. The apartments of Medici Pope Leone X, with their fresco history of the Medicis, are also closed to the public; they are the offices of the meyor and his chief aides.

Starting this yaw the collection of Charles Loeser, an American who lived in Florence and willed his art to the city before his death in 1928, is open after having been closed for several years. It includes a curious Piero di Cosimo fantasy, Passion of Christ, a breathtaking Ferrara school fresco, and Florentine primitives. (You may have to wait your turn to enter these five small rooms during popular viewing hours.) If you are game, climh to the tower for a matchless view of the littla world of the Medicis. Tha prison in this tower hosted Cosimo de Medici before his exile, and Savonarola before his execution.

Outside again, stand for a while in the Loggia, not so much to examine the second-rate statuary that swamps the one or two fine works in it, as to evoke another corner of Florence as it was and remains. The Loggia was the site of major outdoor ceremonies of the city-state, and undoubtedly served as shelter from sun or rain at other times. Todey idle Florentines continue to use it to pass the time of day. Multilanguage recordings give e brief history of the square (charge: about 10 cents).

Between the Loggia and the Palazzo Vecchio is the Uffizi Gallery, filled with a dazzling display of works by Leonardo and Botticelli, Filippo Lippi and Fra Angelico, Michelangelo and Raphael, as well as great Venetian, Dutch, Flemish and German paintings The gallery is open from 9 A.M. to 2 P.M. Sundays and holidays from 9 to 1: closed Mondays, Admission: about 25 cents, Sundays free. To visit the Vasari self-portrait gallery bridging the Arno river, make reservations when purchasing your regular ticket on Wednesday and Saturday mornings. Visitors are taken through (no more than 25 or 30 at a time) at 10 A.M. on Wednesdays, 10 and 11:30 A.M. on Saturdays.

The best restaurant on the square, with outdoor service in fine weather, is Cavallino (closed Wednesdays), with pasta dishes to 80 cents, main courses from $1.50; you can dine well for under $5. Inside there are vaulted ceilings and no-nonsense decor, so-so paintings on the walls. Crowded, clean. I'd be ungrateful if I failed to mention the Bargello, where pasta runs to 60 cents, main dishes from $1.80 to $2.50. But better to leave the square (perhaps via the narrow passage between the Loggia and the Ristorante Orcagna at No. 1) for the Via Lambertesca a few hundred feet south. Here I found the most unusual restaurant in the whole city. Trattoria Antico Fattore serves traditional (often farmers') food such as Crostini---Chicken liver cana н 54 cents, pappa al pomodoro (a thick bread and tomato soup) at 40 cents, sausages and beans all 'uccellettocooked in oil with sage, onion and tomatoes-at $2. Other main, dishes run to $2.20. Note that all Italian restaurants add a "bread and cover" charge ranging from 30 to 50 cents, seldom higher. Caffès on the square range from the posh Rivoire to the nameless holes-inthe-wall that expand infinitely, thanks to their outdoor tables in warm weath-er. Rivoire (closed Mondays) serves espresso coffee at the counter for 20 cents, at tables indoors or out for 40 cents; cappuccino 25 and 50 cents. P Lorenzaccio on the northeast corner of the square: espresso 15 to 30 cents, cappuccino 20 to 40 cents, and pizzas from 90 cents to $1.40 (besides regular meals).

"Bags nut at 7 A.M." became a familiar call as Bus 4, Group D, motored nver 1,375 miles nf Kenya and Tanzania while its happy occupants played the twin roles of restless wanderer and pampered tourist with equal pleasure. The red dust of the Tsavo permanently settied in our hair and the broken spring in the back seat was a steady source of discomfort. (We enforced a strict rotation system.) Victor had a queasy stomach, Frank's mnno-Ingues nn the problems nf rural electrificatinn irritated Carol and Toni and my hinoculars somehnw became communal property. But nnne nf it mattered. The African landscape - the banhah, the thurnbush, the ubiquitnus acacia-had us in its grip.

Bus 4's driver and game spotter was Inseph, a moody Kikuyu whn wore an American hockey shirt and a peace medallion, aod who shyly observed us as much as we nbserved him. We gat alnng famnusly. Until we gat the hang of spotting the game nurselves, our dependence on Joseph was enormous. "Zebra," he'd say, pninting at same whitish specks in the distance.

"How do you know?" I'd ask, sticking my head out the windnw.

"Oh, my dear." By that time it would have been abvinus to a 4-year-and that the animals cavarting an the plains were zehra.

Animals we'd known since the days of nur childhood picture bonks-elephant, giraffe, lion, hippnpntamus, rhino, zehra-thräled us silly in their oatural eovironment. Antelopes we'd seen through bars at the Central Park Zoo, nating their species but never really sorting out their identifying characteristics, suddenly and forcefully became dear friends, unmistakable even at a distance, after Juseph had shown us what to lnnk fnr. Once you've seeo a gamboling herd of little Thnmson's gazelles, with their distinctive Helen Frankenthaler stroke of black across their sides, you will know them forever as Tommys.

Our core group of four, used to friendly competition, gnt very good at animal spotting, which requires a sharp eye, a politician's memory for names and enough self-confidence to overcome the embarrassment of making a wrong call. "Impala at 11 o'clock Harteheest at 2, 2:30, 3." (That would be "Dik-dik running across the road! Annther dik-dik!" (That would be Victor, our champion dik-dik spotter.) "Stop the car! A troop of baboons!" (That would be Susan, pretending she was Jane Goodall.) "Uhh, Joseph, Joseph, the big white animal on the hill—"

"Oh, my dear. Cow." (The name of the cnw spotter shall fnrever be suppressed.)

Our ignnrance of the lesser species and Joseph's limited English led to some micor confusions. A pretty but smallisb creature we had been calling the Grand gazelle was properly a Grant's gazelie. The spiky horned antelopes hopping on the rocky outcrops weren't cliffspringers, they were klipspringers. We took corrective measures, purchasing a cheap paperback guidebook, "Animals of East Africa," that was easy to thumb through in the minibus. Eor serious knowledge about mating habits and social organization, Cynthia Moss's hardcover "Pnrtraits in the Wild" was a treasure. Elephants are matriarchal.

Since we slept each night in another lodge nn this "We give more for your mnney" safari, I nught to report on nur accommodations. They ranged from a Hilton-operated complex (built by millionaire white hunters who ran nut of mnney) in Kenya's Taita Hills tn a genuine tent camp in Amboseli, at the foot nf snowcapped Kilimanjaro, where we washed in basins by the light of an oil lantern, and where vervet mankeys adept at npening luggage played bavoc with our film cans. Mnst of the lodges had swimming pools for humans and landscaped water holes for viewing animals withnut stirring from the terrace. In cootrast to the stark, stunted terrain of the game reserves-the Tsavo in particular has been victimized by periodic droughts -hibiscus and frangipani hinomed profusely at the lodges in cultivated plantings, and the flowering succulents seemed to oeed oo encouragement at all.

With one exception, Momella Lodge, near Arusha, Tanzania, billed as the glamorous, exciting location where the film "Hatari" was shnt, every game lodge we stayed at was glamorous and exciting. It was only we, the bedraggled, hot and dusty tourists, who looked rather less than first class at the end of the day. (T-shirts and jeans proved to be the best attire for our daily game drives; those in Group Dwith a stake in freshly pressed cnttons and freshly set hair grew increasingly grumpy as our safari wore oo.)

Although on vacations I generally gain a few pounds, on safari I managed to eat three full meals a day and lose weight. I'm not sure why, because the food was far better than I'd imagined it would be, and I certainly ate enough of it. Fresh mango, papaya and pineapple for breakfast along with the eggs and toast; cold meats and salad and sometimes a spicy curry for lunch, served huffet style with second helpings and rich desserts; sit-down dinners with a fish course (a local specialty, Nile perch), a meat course, imported wines and native cheeses. At Ngorongoro Crater in Tanzania we had ty, Nile perch), a meat course, imported wines and native cheeses. At Ngorongoro Crater in Tanzania we had nur one exotic supper—broiled zebra. It tasted like a slightly gristly minote steak; nnbody asked for a second portinn. Seeing all those trusting zebra in the Crater and then eating one seemed like an indelicate betrayal

Dinner was the time for selective socializing with other members of Group D, who turned out not to be Neanderthal ogres after all. Over a bottle of Tusker beer and parkage of Embessy filters, we overcame our regional and cultural differences and compared notes on our newly established common ground. "One majestic oryz? Oh, we saw three oryz, two gerenules and one kudn." A din of French, Dutch, German, Japanese and Italian animal counts emanated from other tables. Group D's guide, Lynne, an Amer-

Group D's ginne. Lynne, an American, came to Kenya on a two-week vacation in 1969 and never left. She directed the seven buzes in our caravan, assigned us our rooms in the lodges, regaled us with tales of her complicated love life and, for an extra $20 per person, handled our tipping for porterage and meal service. Collective tipping turned out to be a boon. Not only didn't I indulge in my usual dread that I had forgotten a chambermaid but the extra shillings I handed out became meaningful a pleasure, not a duty. And they were received in the same spirit.

It was good to learn from Lynnethat rather than perpetuating the stereotype of the Ugly American, United States tourists in East Africa have reputations for being polite and uncomplaining. For their part, the black Kenyans and Tanzanians we met were friendly and helpful and pleased when we greated them with "Jambo," the Swahili for hi, hello.

Lynne also gave us a knowledgeable rundown on the optional side trips that were available on days when we had no scheduled game runs through the reserves. Half of Group D, and not necessarily the older ones, seemed relieved to be able to spend the free time recovering at 'poolside; the rest were determined to experience as much as we could as long as our stamina held out. A hoshed morning boat trip to see the bird life on Lake Jipe, Tanzania, cost $12 a person and gave us, in return, the sight of huge blue kingfishers, brilliant green bee-eaters, multicolored Egyptian geese, and stalky-legged lily trotters busily trotting on the lily pads. An afternoon drive into the Taita Hills ($6) gave us an opportunity to look at people for a change, and allowed us to examine their terraced planting of coffee, sisal and corn. Regrettably, ooe optinnal I had been looking forward to since New York, a side trip from Ngorongoro Crater to Olduvai Gorge, where Mary Leakey discovered the skull of Zinjanthropus, I can't report on because I was sacked out back at the lodge, giving in to my own threshold of physical exhaustion.

Mombasa, on the Kenyan co tour; and a place where for time I understood that desc the sum as "merciless." I si the peeling room of nur deci: -once Mombasa's finestothers went shopping for cloths, beads, batiks and card night I revived. Neither does Robert Redford. They want to keep it a secret, but they can't help raving about the town. Both Atlantic City and South Pass are just sonth of Wyoming's State Route 28 in one of the most historic regioos of the West. This area served first as the rendezvous country for early fur trappers and mountain men and later a part of the Oregon Trail (a plaque commemorates the Whitman family, among the most famous early settlers). Still later it was famous for its goldmining camps (today they're charming ghost towns). While making the munds, catch the amhiance of Atlantic City, with its saloon in the old mercantile building and the Buffalo Chips band playing "gold-rush type music" every other weekend. You can also hike through the surrounding hills and visit old abandoned mines. South Pass City is considered one of the hetter historic ghost town renovatioo joos. While in the area, see if you can find Oregon Trail wagoo tracks.

Wind River Canyon: Along U.S. 20 in Wyoming between Shoshoni and Thermopolis. Believe it or oot, you're in the heart of feminist country. Nearby is the grave of Sacajawea, without whom Lewis and Clark might never have discovered what a bargain Thomas Jefferson got io the Louisiana Purchase. Furthermore, South Pass City was the home of Esther Morris. the first female justice of the peace and an early crusader for women's suffrage. Wind River Canyon itself is a splendidly rugged piece of real estate on the east eod of the Wind River Indian reservation. At Thermopolis, you can take a refreshing dip in natural hot springs. (I preferred the state bath house, antiseptic though it was, to the commercial pools, which reminded me of faded resorts on the Jersey shore.)

Crow Indian Reservation and Custer (Little Big Horn) Battlefield: To reach these sites in south-ceotral Montana. follow U.S. 87 and I-90 out of Billings to the town of Crow Agency and U.S. 212 to the battlefield. The pair mark one of the most remarkable justapositions in the West. The Crow were allies of Custer aod ecemies of the Sioux, who decimated Custer's troops exactly 100 years ago this year. The reservation is noteworthy for its annoal Crow Fair, which this year will be held in the third week in August. Indians from hundreds of miles away gather in the grassy plains near Hardin aod Crow Agency, set up teepees, campers and hot dog staods, aod stage a gala parade on horseback. Young girls in family heirloom dresses and boys in beaded huckskio finery and feathers join in traditional tom-tom and modern Indian dance competitioos. It's a wonderful spectacle, free of the raucous commercialism of betcelebrations and stil largely bypassed by tourists. Right next door are the rolliog wheat-colored hills and coulees of the Little Bighorn Battlefield. The self-guided trails explain what happened on the site in 1876. No matter how you feel about the battle, the site and the cemetery are immensely moving.

Gallatin and Madison River Valleys and Virginia City: From Bozeman, Mont., loop south on U.S. 191 along the Gallatin River, skim the western edge of Yellowstone (see, you didn't miss it after all), then drive west and north on U.S. 287 past Quake Lake and along the Madison River through Ennis to Virginia City. This trip is a tour of Montana in miniature-the huge treeless prairie gradually giving way to the lush pine-fringed mountains of Beaverhead National Forest. I find Colorado's central Rockies somewhat barren, but Montana's Rockies are somebow warmer, greener, more friendly. The Gallatin and Madison Rivers are to trout fishermen what New York's Chrysler Building is to skyscraper freaks-the ultimate. Virginia City and Nevada City, just a mile down the road, are superbly restored ghost towns with a uniquely grizzly history. Virginia City was the home of the notorious Plummer gang of thieves that forced into being the west's most vigilant vigilante groups. A lot of people were hanged there, and the Bovey family, which is credited with making Virginia City, was the bome of the has eveo salvaged the beams from which the rascals were suspended. "The Missouri Breaks" was filmed in Nevada City and outside Billings. Don't coofuse this Virginia City with the one in Nevada, which is gaudy and jammed. Sawtooth Wilderness and National Recreation Area: From Salmon, Idaho, drive southwest on U.S. 93 to Stanley. then south through the recreation area. Gary Smith, a ranger here for several years, describes the Sawtooths as "the same kind of spectacular mountains as the Tetons, except with more summits." Stanley, according to Ranger Smith, is the hearty, beery, modern cowboy town par excellence, complete with Saturday night hrawls. Driving due south, you'll see the White Cloud range on the east, the Sawtooths on the West. Take a day's fike into the primitive region (no vehicles) by hopping a boat at Redfish Lake Lodge. which will ferry you across to hiking trails that meander through the woods hack to the lodge. It's an easy drive south on U.S. 93 to Sun Valley, the country's classiest ski resort.

Flaming Gorge and Spirit Lake: On the Wyomiog-Utah border, this spot is reached from Ogden, Utah, hy driving east on Interstate 80 to Evanston, Wyo., and then south back into Utah on State Route 414. What makes this special is the comhination of high plateau country, desert and the backdrop of the imposing High Uinta Mountains Basque sheepherders and their flocks populate the countryside. Dead Horse Point and Island in the Sky: West of U.S. 163 out of Moah, Utah. The drive to the great red rock canyon country of southern Utah is a long one. It is also worth every minute of it. There, deep in the high sandstone desert, is where the Colorado River has cut layer after layer of geologic history to create the most stunning scenery in the United States. Take either the paved road to Dead Horse Point, a Utah state park, or the dirt one to the even more isolated overlooks of the Island in the Sky section of Canyonlands National Park. Pull on a nair of sneakers to scramhle on the slickrock. Take a Jeep tour even deeper into the wilds. Camp out. Speod enough time here so you'll begin to feel like a lizard, which is the way you should want to feel in a place like this. But doo't get lost-the buzzards could find you before a ranger does. That's how isolated this area is.

Escalante Canyons: Drive south of Escalante, Utah, along Hole-in-the-Rock road (unpaved) and west along the road that runs south from Torrey to Boulder to Escalante. Once you get hooked on red rock canyons, you'll This is to an every place to get to. The finest parts are side canyons of the Escalante River (a tributary of the Colorado) that can only be resched by backpacking.

Maybe I shouldn't be mentioning this area at all. It is indescribably remote. heautiful, frightening and uplifting. You know-the kind of place that makes you start babbling poetry. Tiny rivulets with gnarled cedar and cottonwood trees growing along hanks hemmed in by smooth narrow canyon walls dripping with the stuff called "desert varnish." (Actually iron oxide.) The first time I was in Escalante country a normally sane photographer from Chicago stood atop ooe of the cliffs facing an area called the Devil's Backbone, hroke out into a byena-like laugh and started heaving rocks over the ledge. The second time, Sierra Club-.hers made me swear I would not identify in print, ever, the exact side canyon we had explored. The most amazing thing is that except for a small portioo within the Glen Canyon National Recreation Area, the Escalante Canyons are not a "designated" anything-natiooal park, mooumeot, historic site or state park.

Mooument Valley: This site is reached hy driving via State Road 163 north from Kayenta, Ariz., or 163 south from Mexican Hat, Utah. This is a different kind of red rock country and nerbans the most photograph usual tourist routes. The setting for some of John Ford's most famous western movies, including "Stegecoach," "The Searchers" and "Cheyenne Autumn." Monument. Valley is a wide open desert landscape punctuated with weird, croded buttles, pinnacles, mesas, needles and other strangely compelling natural -formations. From Gouldings Trading Post at the southwest end, you can take Jeep tours into the heart of the valley and you'll swear that John Wayne is about to gallop around the next bend. Be especially careful if you're driving through the valley. Navajo families herd their sheep across its impaved roads at the most unexpected times. Bring water. Bring movie memories. Monument Valley is better live than in Technicolor.

Canyon de Chelly: Follow the signs. east from Chinle, Ariz. Deep inside the Nevajo Nation, this national monument (pronounced Canyon duh SHAY) epitomizes the wonders of the Southwest. You can ride on top of the rims and see weathered sandstone canvonwalls sheltering a mostly dry riverbed along which Navajo families still tend their farms. Niches in the canyon protect the ruins of ancient Pueblo Indian dwellings-those of the Anasazi, or "ancient ones." The ruins are similar to, though not as extensive as, those. in Colorado's Mesa Verde National Park. The region itself is rich in pinonjuniper woodlands and high enough to be cool at night even in the middle of summer.

Chaco Canyon: From Gallup, N.M., take I-40 to State Route 57 north and follow the signs. After Mesa Verde, this is the most important of the Anasazi remains. Amateur archeologists and anthropologists are inevitably intrigued by these ruins, because they have so much in common with mod-

"The coffee is enough," she says. When our order comes, Frau Hilde begins eating the schlag from the top of her coffee e small spoonful at a time. I think again of my mother, gooe now two years. She would have been 73 in the spring, and hating every minute of it. The great hurden of her life was having a Marleoe Dietrich face and watching it age noe by line.

When she lost her teta in her lete 60's from a gum infectioo, it hurt her almost like a loss of sight or bearing. She didn't enjoy being seen around anymore. The truth is, though I am no Dietrich, aging holds the same dread for me, too.

"I've been looking at your daughter," Frau Hilde says as the girls crawl under our table. "You have Wiener Blut, as we say---Viennese blood?"

"Yes. She has that porcelain-painted skin my mother had," I say. "It skipped a generation, unfortunately."

"Good looks are often more trouble than they are worth. I was a ballet dancer when I was youog, during the First War, I was courted by many officers. I never married-struggled to be my own woman always. It's easier now, I can tell you."

"To go out and buy yourself violetsaod come here. How I envy your being eble to spend your birthday this way.

"Oh, the coocerts," Frau Hilde says. "In the summer I come almost every dey." She puts her finger to her lips to indicate that the tuning up will be over shortly. I look up from my ice to see the orcbestra leader, black slickedback hair and suit, standing over us.

"Which waltz do we begin with today?" be asks Frau Hilde.

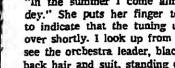

"Let my American friend have the choice." she says.

I shake my bead. "But it's your day."

"Then, please play 'Wiener Blut' for the lady and her little girl," Frau Hilde savs.

The orchestra leader greets a few more of his regulars and goes back to the shell to strike up the waltz. I crane my neck to check my daughter and her friend, playing et the rear of the terrace.

Now I can settle in my seat and oask in what I came to Vienna forcolor, music, gemütlichkeit, Also, there is the thought that maybe one of these hirthdays soon I will start buying myself violets.

How the jet set turned a 7th century European city into the 8th wonder of the world. Dubrovnik.

TRAVEL

Sophisticated Europeans have made this charming old city the new place to go. A white-washed playground set along the blues and greens of the Adriatic. Shaped by an-cient fortifications, with a backdrop of craggy cliffs civilized by sculptured greenery and softened by dunes of sun-washed sand. In the distance, the soaring silhouettes .of mountain peaks rising to dizzying heights above the red tiled roofs, then plunging headlong to the wave-curled floor of the sea.

TRAVEL

Here, the sun is king. And rain clouds rarely cast their grey shadows across the warm tracts of blue sky.

Dubrovnik is a summer fesival — all year round. There are swinging night clubs and quiet restaurants, charming museums and colorful galleries. Try your hand at bacarat in the elegant casino. Or your feet at dancing on the candle-lit terrace of a discotheque.

The daytime sports program is equally im-pressive. Swing your racquet on a clay-floored court tucked in a fragrant pine grove. Or swing your skis against the curl of a gentle wave. Raise a sail amidst islands blessed by a steady breeze. Or lower yourself into the clear waters of the Adriatic-or your hotel swimming pool.

And while Dubrovnik is a vacation paradise, her prices are still distinctly down-to-earth. There are 2500 fashionable deluxe and first-class hotel rooms at old-fashioned prices. The beautiful Babin rooms at olo-rashioned prices, the beautiful Baoin Kuk Hotel offers a room, an American style break-fast and dinner (or lunch), plus a beautiful sea-view terrace to enjoy it on, for $13 to $24 (depend-ing on the season) per person double occupancy. The bargains don't end with your bed and board. A taxi ride from Dubrovnik Airport to your notel goes for only about $8. And a fine dinner will run between $5 and $8. A cruise to one of the piccuresque islands about $14 including the picnic ush. (Atlas Tours offers this and 16 other exciting sun and fun makes you thirsty, a bottle of fra-grant Dalmatian wine runs about $1.50 in a local restaurant. Now is the time to n January 15, 1977, the Queen Elizabeth 2 embarkson what can only be described as an international event - a cruise around the world.

A fantastic voyage to the far reaches of the earth including the People's Republic of China.

Join The Queen for all-or part-of this unique experience.

XX

Twenty-one ports in eighty-one days.

The Oueen Elizabeth 2 follows a sun-filled warmweather route across the seven seas to four continents and twenty-one ports from Rio to Cape Town, Bombay to Hong Kong, You cross the equator, pass the international date line and steam through the Panama Canal.

And all the while you'll be wined, dined and nampered as only Cunard knows how. Imagine, 3 crew members for every 4 passengers.

No other ship is so well suited to world cruising.

The Queen Elizabeth 2 is a born world traveler. Her gallant speed gets you to major ports quickly, so you can enjoy more time ashore. Her great size assures you of smooth sailing all the way. And her staterooms-the largest afloat-provide a maximum of comfort.

Be one of the few people to visit China.

By special arrangement between Cunard and the People's Republic of China, you can be one of the select number to enjoy a land excursion to this great country. Once there, you'll see the Chinese Opera, attend a banquet, see the famed Chinese acrobats, temples of antiquity, moderncommunes, and more.

THE NEW IVAN THES, SUIDAL, J.

Take only part of the cruise, still see China.

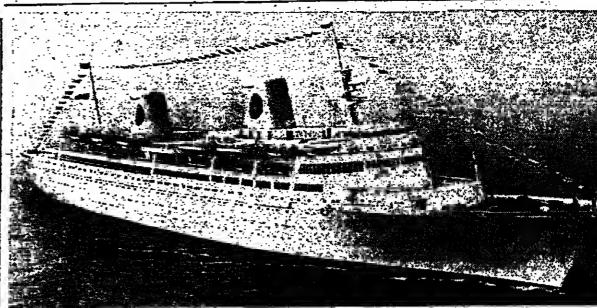

For the first time ever, Cunard has made it possible for a limited number of passengers to visit the People's Republic of China even if they are not taking the entire cruise. Choose from five special segments, all including China.

For instance, 39 days from Hong Kong to New York is $4,367 to $6,607 with air fare and land arrangements all taken care of by Thomas Cook. The full 81 days: $6,950 to $30,000. (Prices per person, double occupancy. The cost of the 3day China excursion will be about $300.)

Opportunities like this are rare indeed. Reserve at once.

See your travel agent now for a free brochure. Or write Vaughn Rickard, Dept.A2, 555 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. Then get set to sail. Depart from New York or Fort Lauderdale. Return to Los Angeles if you like. If you can bear the thought of coming back at all.

A rare chance to enjoy a 12-day Gulf cruise— with all the comforts of a round-the-world vessel.

There is something special about the elegance of a round-the-world vessel. You sense it on no other ship. There is an uncrowded vastness to its decks and lounges. A comfortable spaciousness to its limited number of cabins. A deft, nimble graciousness to its seasoned crew.

Most people who take short cruises rarely experience the exhilarating pleasure of such a vessel. But this fall you can sample it to the full. For 12 glorious days. Aboard the Royal Viking Sea.

Before leaving on her third round-theworld cruise in January, 1977, the Sea will take two 12-day Gulf/Caribbean cruises. Here is your chance to combine the convenience of a short cruise with the luxury of a long cruise. Even people who have sailed these waters a dozen times before will find the experience extraordinary.

There are a mere 289 cabins, all First Class. 94% of all passengers enjoy sweeping. outside views. With fewer people aboard than ordinary short-cruise vessels, the 300-man crew has ample time to care for everyone.

The experience continues throughout the ship, thanks to a spaciousness that lets you live your days as actively or as quietly as you choose. There are deck games, and quiet out-of-the-way lounges. There is a swimming pool large enough for swimming, and decks quiet enough for dreaming. There is rousing evening entertainment, and deserted moonlit railings. The dining room, set high on an upper deck, is large enough to serve everyone at a single, relaxed seating. This freedom to vary your pace to match your moods is the hallmark of luxurious, lengthy cruising. The Sea expresses it beautifully.

Along the way you will visit Playa del Carmen and Cozumel, Mexico. Georgetown, Grand Cayman, Montego Bay, Jamaica. And Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Ports carefully chosen to offer youra variety of shore amusements: beach-strolling, sightseeing, shopping. If you are thinking of taking a short cruise this fall, here is a marvelous opportunity to take it with long-cruise luxury. Aboard the round-the-world Royal Viking . Sea. Of Norwegian registry. And spirit. Each cruise offers a choice of embarkation ports. The first departs Fort Lauderdale November 16, and New Orleans November 19. The second departs Fort Lauderdale November 29, and New Orleans December 2,

Like "suspended" decks to absorb vibration and insure quiet sailing. More and bigger public rooms including 4 bars, shopping arcade, a restaurant in the sky, and a nightclub with a marble dance floor! A vast expanse of open deck space with glamorous Lido/Pool area.

But the ultimate innovation is the stateroom design. Did we say stateroom? It's more like a "suite." Read on and see why.

Can you find another ship that gives every passenger a "suite"?

When you return from breakfast, your bedroom is gone. In its place, you'll find a living room.

Can you find a 7-day itinerary that offers more ports including South America?

Cunard Countess.

What would a new ship be without a great itinerary? The Cunard Countess has the best. You'll visit six "countries" in seven days; even another continent.

You'll go all the way to South America with stops at Caracas (La Guaira),

Venezuela; Grenada; Barbados; St. Lucia; St. Thomas; and San Juan. Go as far in the Caribbean

as you can go. In fact, you'll see more of the Caribbean in a week than most people get to see in a lifetime. No other one-week cruise ship offers more.

Can you find so much value for your dollar?

Cunard Countess gives you more for your money than any other cruise ship in her class. Seventy percent of her staterooms are outside — and every one is better priced than comparable rooms on competitive ships. Even her minimum-priced rooms are a special value.

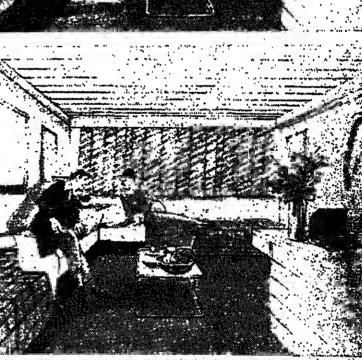

All have wall-to-wall carpeting, private bathroom, radio and telephone. Plus you get the best itinerary in the Caribbean and service in the 136-year Cunard tradition.

The Cunard Countess leaves from San Juan every Saturday starting with an inaugural voyage on August 14th. See your travel agent or call Cunard at (212) 983-2510. Rates include round-trip air fare direct from New York, four superb meals daily, all entertainment on board, port taxes and transfers between San Juan airport and the ship. All for only complete from New York

Two weeks to spare?

Get off the ship and spend a week at Cunard's Hotel La Toc on St Lucia or at our Paradise Beach Hotel on Barbados. The Cunard Countess will pick you up on her way home one week later. The complete 2-week fly/cruise/resort package is $770-$1010. (Meals extra at resort.)

*Via Overseas National Ainways, a U.S.-certificated supplemental air carrier; travel arranged by GWV Travel Inc. Rates per person, double occupancy.

You might think you're looking at two different rooms. You're not. You're looking at a "suite" on the Cumard Countess. At the top is your statement, by day. Perfect for entertaining. Below, the same statement by night.
